4 Major Strikes End; Shipyards Tieup Threatens

Officials Expect Johnstown Steel Settlement Soon, Probably Today

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

Defense production's largest and most recent strike, which broke out yesterday at the Bethlehem Steel Co.'s Cambria plant, at Johnstown, Pa., probably will be speedily settled, perhaps today, by an agreement similar to that which yesterday ended the walkout at the company's parent mills in Bethlehem, Pa., it was forecast here last night.

According to reports received by defense and labor officials here, the voting for officers of an allegedly company-dominated union at Cambria, which precipitated the strike, will be completed within 24 hours. With the ballot boxes removed, it was thought, the striking Steel Workers Organizing Committee members may return to their jobs.

The other Bethlehem strike was settled yesterday at the end of an early morning conference between company, union and Government representatives at which a four-point agreement was negotiated.

Vote on Shipyard Strike

On other labor fronts, however, strikes still threatened.

The C. I. O. Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America, Local 15, empowered its executive committee last night to call a strike of the 1,500 workers in the Hoboken shipyards of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation.

Simultaneously, a meeting of Brooklyn, N. Y., Local 13, which claims representation for 3,500 employed in two other Bethlehem shipyards, named a negotiating committee to confer Monday with the company.

The Hoboken local has been negotiating with Bethlehem for two months on a contract. Philip H. van Gelder, nationally secretary-treasurer of the union, said the deliberations there were to form the basis for the three New York Harbor yards. The Bethlehem yards have been working overtime on repairs to American and foreign merchant craft.

Federal Conciliator James Fitzpatrick was assigned to the case yesterday.

In general, however, the defense labor situation showed marked improvement yesterday, with the announcement of plans for immediate action by the National Defense Mediation Board on the four cases certified to it Thursday bearing immediate fruit in the settlement yesterday of a five-week strike of the Universal Cyclops Steel Co. strike.

The board wired Federal Conciliator Charles R. Ward that a scheduled meeting of company and C. I. O. union representatives, scheduled here for this morning, would be

U. S. Mediators Face First Test Today

Hearings to Be Held In Condenser Corp., Vanadium Disputes

The National Defense Mediation Board faces the first test of its efficacy today when three-men panels of its members will seek to settle two strikes in key defense industries.

Off to a phenomenally successful start, the board will not need to meet today, as planned, with labor and management representatives involved in a third strike, that of the Universal Cyclops Steel Corporation. Shortly after Board Vice Chairman William H. Davis summoned them by telegraph, a settlement of the 41-day-old dispute was negotiated.

The two meetings today will take up issues in the Vanadium Corporation of America and the Condenser Corporation disputes. A third conference is scheduled for Monday on the International Harvester Co. strike.

Urge Resumption of Work

In issuing telegraphic summons to the parties to the disputes, Davis also appealed for immediate resumption of operations so that the strike issues could be settled "while production is going on," in order to "speed production of essential defense material at this time of great national emergency."

Davis announced the membership of the panels as follows:

For the Vanadium Corporation conference—Davis, representing the public; Thomas Kennedy, of the C. I. O. United Mine Workers, representing labor, and Roger D. Lapham, head of the American-Hawaiian Steamship Co., representing employers.

For the Condenser Corporation conference—Davis, for the public; George W. Harrison, A. F. of L. secretary-treasurer, for labor, and Cyrus Ching, of the United States Rubber Co., for the employers.

The panel for the Harvester dispute will consist of five board members. Board Chairman Clarence A. Dykstra will represent the public; Harrison and Philip Murray, C. I. O. president, or Kennedy, will represent employes, and Walter C. Teagle, president of Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, and Eugene Meyer, publisher of The Washing-

School Funds Plea Sent To Congress

Influx of Defense Workers' Families Increases Needs, Committee Is Told

By James D. Secrest
Post Staff Writer

The District Commissioners yesterday put directly up to Congress the question of appropriating $1,197,7710 for needed schools and equipment.

Passing along the urgent budget estimates, necessitated largely by the growth in population due to defense activity, the Commissioners emphasized that the District does not have the funds to finance the program.

Four Sources for Funds

Four possibilities for raising the money were set forth in a letter addressed to Chairman Taylor, of the House Appropriations Committee. They are:

1. Passage of the Overton formula "or some similar means."

2. Participation of the District in a Federal program for supplementing municipal facilities where defense efforts have overtaxed them.

3. Postponement of repayment of PWA and Capper-Cramton Act loans.

4 Postponement of construction of the central library.

The District would have an additional $900,000 by not paying anything on its Federal loans this year, the letter stated, and another $1,000,000 would be released by holding up the library.

Additional Funds Asked

John Russell Young, acting president of the board, said that the board of education had asked $1,985,000 over and above the funds already asked in the 1942 budget for new school construction. He wrote that "the minimum immediate requirements" involved these projects:

Elementary school at Pennsylvania and Alabama Avenues, $190,000.

Land for addition to Benning School, $30,000.

Addition to Benning School, $245,000.

Land for addition to Van Ness School, $30,000.

Addition to Van Ness School, $245,000.

Land for elementary school at Forty-fourth Street and Alabama Avenue, $35,000.

Plans for elementary school at Forty-fourth Street and Alabama Avenue, $3,990

Land for elementary school at Nichols Avenue and Atlantic Street, $30,000.

Other Needs Listed

Land for elementary school at Forty-ninth and Hayes Streets, $25,000.

Land for and beginning construction of junior high school at Forty-ninth Street and Washington Place (ultimate cost $875,000), $340,000.

This $1,173,990 program, the Commissioners pointed out, would have to be supplemented by $23,720 for furniture and equipment, textbooks, custodial service and fuel and light.

Ex-Tenant Robs; Beats Landlady

A former tenant held up Mrs. Josephine Clay Briggs, 55, who operates a rooming house at 1217 1 Street Northwest, and when she refused to surrender her money he beat her. Then he robbed her of $720.

Mrs. Briggs said the man once had occupied a room at her house.

Radio's Moving Day

Four Local Stations Change Frequencies While D. C. Sleeps

Washingtonians, along with the rest of the Nation, will angle for radio programs at new locations this morning, for radio's wholesale "moving day" took place overnight.

As they twirl their dials for the new locations effective at 3 a. m., they have the word of James L. Fly, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, that the changes mean "more room on the air" with "better service and less interference." He delivered a radio address last night explaining the changes.

Four of Washington's five radio stations, WJSV, WRC, WOL and WINX shifted their frequencies, while WMAL remained the same. Dial twisters will find the changed stations slightly higher in the frequency scale than before and in approximately the same positions in relation to one another as before. Push-button sets will, of course, have to be readjusted. It was estimated last night that there are 60,000 push-button sets in the District, according to an official of the Radio Corporation of America here.

Washington radio mechanics yesterday reported that their expected rush had begun, with reservations being taken several days in ad-

Attack Singapore Now, Nazis Urge Matsuoka; Yugoslavia Repudiates Treaty With Axis

Nazis Hold Up Invasion, Seek To Divide Serbs, Croats

By the Associated Press

Belgrade, March 28.—Yugoslavia today repudiated, in effect, the Axis alliance and informed quarters close to the new government predicted that Germany would withhold military assault at least momentarily while trying to break up the country from within.

Hitler would try to achieve this goal, it was suggested, by exploiting old Serb-Croat hatreds.

[International News Service reported that the Yugoslav government had ordered total mobilization, and was calling 300,000 reservists to join the 1,200,000 soldiers already at battle stations.]

The Yugoslav army, 1,200,000 strong, stood mobilized at the frontiers, ready for any military threat, but sharpest interest shifted to Zagreb, where the Croat leader, Vice Premier Vladimir Macek, debated with his lieutenants whether to remain in the new cabinet.

Macek, a holdover from the "Axis" government which was kicked out Thursday, was said to fear that Croatia, the northern part of the country, would bear the first fury of any German or Italian attacks, and thus he desired fulfillment of the Vienna agreement of last Tuesday.

Roosevelt Sends Message to Peter II

President Roosevelt, it was announced last night, has sent the following telegram to King Peter II of Yugoslavia:

"At this moment, when your majesty has assumed the full exercise of your royal rights and powers, and the leadership of a brave and independent people, I wish to share with the people of the United States, in the expression of our sincere and genuine wishes for the health and well-being of your majesty and for the freedom and independence of Yugoslavia.

"Furthermore, I extend the hope that the relations between your government and the Government of the United States may be mutually beneficial in the support of those principles of liberty and tolerance cherished by the Yugoslav and American peoples."

The United States on Thursday promised aid to Yugoslavia under the lend-lease program.

Queen Marie to Go Back to Belgrade

London, March 28 (AP).—Queen Marie of Yugoslavia said tonight she planned to return to Belgrade with her two younger sons as soon as she is well enough.

QUEEN MARIE

The 41-year-old mother of King Peter II is convalescing from an operation performed in Switzerland about a year ago. The brothers of the King are Tomislav and Andrei.

"I have tried to bring up all three boys to act on their own judgment, to work out their own problems, to be tough," she said. "I know Peter is well able to look after himself and that he will make a worthy King."

Marseille Crowds Cheer Yugoslavs

Throngs Pile Flowers On Memorial Plaque To King Alexander

By the Associated Press

Marseille, France, March 28.—Buoyant French by many thousands poured today and tonight through La Canebiere, Marseille's proudest promenade, singing and shouting their joy in the resurgence of Yugoslavia and heaping a mountain of flowers about the spot where King Alexander I was assassinated seven years ago.

Assembled by nothing more than the whispered word that Yugoslavia had defied Berlin, the populace milled through the promenade and into the Place de la Bourse, at the harbor end, crying "Long Live Serbia!" and singing "La Marseillaise."

The crowd stood silently late tonight, unmoving, in obvious demonstration. Inside the prefecture on the Place de la Bourse, soldiers carrying rifles were held ready for any rioting, but none developed. Only once did the demonstration cause police action. Then, several loads of demonstrators were taken away in cars.

Late in the day, all florist shops were closed to prevent the demonstrations from continuing. Within an hour or so wreaths and bouquets made of paper began piling up on top of the natural blossoms before the plaque commemorating Alexander's memory in the Place de la Bourse.

Berlin Waiting Impatiently For Reply, Hints At Strong Action

By the Associated Press

Berlin, March 28.—Germany exhibited an impatient desire tonight for a yes or no answer as to whether Yugoslavia was going flatly to repudiate her new Axis membership, and it appeared that the German people were being prepared to expect energetic reactions.

The radio and the press reported—without particular excitement—that there had been anti-German demonstrations in Belgrade, and the authoritative commentary Dienst Aus Deutschland remarked that German press reports cast doubt upon a statement attributed to the Yugoslav government that Germans had not actually been mistreated there.

There was ample precedent, it was observed, for a vigorous German response to the abuse of its nationals in neighboring countries.

(The British radio tonight quoted a Belgrade report as saying that the German Minister to Yugoslavia, Viktor von Heeren, had been recalled by Germany after he had had an audience with the new Yugoslav premier, Gen. Dusan Simovic.)

Reich Not Satisfied

It was understood that Premier Dusan Simovic's answer given this morning to German's "urgent request" for an exposition of Yugoslavia's attitude was considered unsatisfactory by the Reich.

Tonight's note was said to have reminded Yugoslavia that the Axis pact is binding.

D. N. B. reported tonight from Belgrade that no new statement from the Yugoslav regime could be expected before Saturday afternoon, and that more likely there would be a lapse of several days.

Neutrality Proposed

As understood here, Simovic proposed to have a strict neutrality, implying no partisan cooperation with Greece or Britain. It also was understood from press reports that there was some disposition among the new masters of Yugoslavia to let the Axis agreement hang in the air—unratified but not specifically repudiated.

The Germans make it a habit to refuse to express themselves on hypothetical or indefinite situations, so there was no authorized comment as to what would happen if Belgrade decided to let the pact dangle uncertainly.

It was conceded here that Gen. Simovic was faced with great problems and a confusion of old Balkan hatreds.

Navy Silent On Ships Sent To Australia

Issues 'No Comment' On Future Plans In South Pacific

A brief statement from the Navy high command aroused speculation last night that 13 American warships recently sent to Australia and New Zealand might be kept indefinitely in the South Pacific.

The possibility that the four cruisers and nine destroyers might be held there for their moral influence on Japan was discussed after Admiral Harold R. Stark issued a statement that he would make "no comment" as to their future movements.

The Navy statement, described as occasioned by "inquiries," coincided with the departure of a squadron of seven of the American warships commanded by Rear Admiral John H. Newton from Brisbane, Australia. Its destination, like that of another squadron which recently visited New Zealand, was undisclosed.

Both squadrons, according to an earlier announcement, are on training cruises, and put into the British South Pacific ports for "good-will" visits. Secretary Knox last week said the ships would return to their base in Hawaii immediately after conclusion of their scheduled visits.

Then came a formal statement from Admiral Stark that in accordance with the Navy's policy not to announce ship movements, "no comment could be made" as to the "whereabouts and future movements" of the 13 warships.

Tokyo newspapers have repeatedly voiced suspicion that the cruise of the vessels was an effort to bring pressure on Japan. Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, has charged that the Administration plans to base the ships at Singapore to aid British defense forces there.

Richardson on Board

The Navy yesterday assigned Rear Admiral James O. Richardson, former commander in chief of the United States Fleet, to duty with the General Board here.

Admiral Richardson was relieved as fleet commander February 1 by Admiral H. E. Kimmel when the naval forces afloat were reorganized in three separate fleets—Atlantic, Pacific and Asiatic. Kimmel commands the Pacific Fleet

Reich Might Let Japanese Fight Alone, Minister Reported Warned

By Louis P. Lochner
Associated Press Staff Writer

Berlin, March 28.—Japanese Foreign Minister Matsuoka, here for talks with German leaders, must make up his mind whether Japan will enter actively into the fight against Britain or be left to face both her and the United States alone later, informed German political circles intimated today.

The taking of Singapore—key British naval base in the Far East—was mentioned specifically in connection with the subject of Japanese participation in the fight.

If Japan declines to enter the fray at present, a victorious Germany and Italy might later show disinterest in Japan's plight, in the opinion of these circles.

That Japan could realize her ambitions in the Far East only by running into British and American opposition was taken as axiomatic.

Practical Politics

Hence, it was argued, if Japan is in earnest about translating her Far Eastern dreams into practical politics, she must realize that her place is on the side of the Axis, not as a silent partner but as an active member.

Satisfaction over Matsuoka's visit at a time of "decisive battle" against England was voiced by German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop last night at a reception for the Japanese statesman and his staff in the Esplanade Hotel.

Matsuoka, who had his first talk with Adolf Hitler yesterday afternoon, was introduced to a large gathering of Nazi political and military leaders. Also present were ambassadors and ministers from the various countries allied with the Axis—including the Yugoslav Minister, Ivo Andric.

Declaring that an ultimate German victory was assured, Von Ribbentrop told the assemblage that every Nazi bomb dropped on England "brings that island empire closer to destruction."

Sees Funk and Hitler

"Actually," he asserted, "this is our conviction—that England's fate is already sealed. We know today that the war is won for Germany and her allies—and toward the end of 1941 we believe the entire world will know it."

Matsuoka's program today included a talk with Walther Funk, economics minister, and a luncheon meeting with Hitler.

Contract Averts Strike of 150 Lathers Here

A threatened strike of 150 union lathers which would have tied up virtually all Government and commercial construction in this area was averted early today by an agreement of management, union and Labor Department conciliator, Frank J. Sheehan.

Settlement terms brought the lathers, members of Local 9 of the Wood, Wire and Metal Workers Union, a year's contract entailing $14 daily for an 8-hour day on all new work. Hitherto the lathers had worked for $13 a day. The $1 increase was the chief issue in the new contract. The old contract expires Monday midnight. Work now under construction will be paid at the old rate.

Someone Had Blundered

Dangerous Drug Put on Market By Mistake, A. M. A. Warns

American Medical Association Reveals Manufacturers' Error; Tablets Sought

By the Associated Press

Chicago, March 28.—The American Medical Association announced tonight that a powerful sleeping tablet had accidentally been substituted for a new drug in the manufacture of 410,000 tablets of the drug.

It added there was a possibility that two patients who died of pneumonia had received the drug.

The association said the drug was sulphathiazole, prepared by a New York drug concern. The company, the A. M. A. said, had inadvertently contaminated sulphathiazole with phenobarbital. Sulphathiazole is used in the treatment of pneumonia and certain infections.

Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the American Medical Association Journal, said the company had bottled 410,000 of the wrong tablets and made wholesale shipments before the error was discovered in December. The concern immediately began to recall all orders from wholesalers and notified the Federal Food and Drug Administration, which has sent hundreds of inspectors into the field to trace the shipments.

As soon as the A. M. A. was advised of the mishap, Dr. Fishbein said, it began contacting physicians known to have case histories involving the interchange of the two drugs. Tablets of the two drugs were the same color and size and looked alike.

Sulphathiazole is a derivative of sulphanilamide, a new drug which physicians have found useful in checking many different diseases. The new refinement, of use particularly in combating staplylococcus infections, was placed on the market last fall.

Dr. Fishbein said the product which had been improperly prepared could be distinguished by the number MPO29, distributed by the Winthrop Chemical Co. of New York, one of the country's largest drug concerns.

The vast majority of sulphathiazole now on the market, Dr. Fishbein emphasized, is quite safe when competently administered by a physician.

'Insult to the Uniform'

Gen. Reckord Investigating Hotel's Exclusion of Sergeant

Fort George G. Meade, Md., March 28 (AP).—Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, commanding officer of the Twenty-ninth Division, said today he would demand an explanation from one of Washington's hotels for allegedly having refused to serve dinner to one of the division's sergeants and a woman companion.

The sergeant reported, Gen. Reckord said, that he and his companion had been asked to leave the hotel's dining room because he was in uniform. Gen. Reckord declared such an act "an insult to the uniform of the United States."

The incident occurred last Saturday night, according to the sergeant's report which reached Gen. Reckord today through military channels. It is the first of its type to be brought officially to the commanding officer's attention since the division was mobilized in February.

"On the night of March 22, accompanied by a young lady," the sergeant reported, "I went into the dining room of the hotel . . . and proceeded to order dinner.

"The order was taken and shortly afterward the manager came over and informed me in the presence of the young lady that it was a

Over Our Shoulder

a preview of the Sunday Post

VARIETY SPICES The Sunday Post and even with national defense continuing to hold the spotlight it's amazing how many interesting aspects of the subject The Post has found for you. Variety throughout the paper—from fiction to triptcts and movies and sports—variety in each section—that's the way The Sunday Post can please so many readers. Here's part of your menu for tomorrow:

Too Many Women

"There are too many women in this house—that's the trouble," Kate Clinton was told as she arrived to take over the management of Helston Park. Pitchforked into the family's squabbles, Kate found many complex situations to challenge her. Chief problem: how to rescue her employer from the clutches of a designing—and blackmailing—widow. The Sunday Post novel threads through mystery and complications to a satisfying lover's knot at the end.

Defending America

Gallup summarizes all his recent polls on the public's attitude toward labor at this time of strikes in defense industries . . . George Bookman writes of the strikes themselves and their effect on the $7,000,000,000 program . . . Barry Sullivan asks: "What good is $7,000,000,000 worth of aid if it can't get across the Atlantic?" and digs into the shipping problem, shows how many ships are needed, tells what's being done . . . the President finds that national defense is another reason for reviving the St. Lawrence waterway project and Hedley Donovan clarifies the matter for you . . . Katharine Graham discovers the Red Cross teaching Washington girls ambulance driving . . . Yugoslavia Repudiates Axis Treaty stories, cautiously as yet, that Macek had been forced at pistol point to enter the new cabinet and that the Croats were "restless."

(That Germany hoped to exploit this rift to the fullest extent was indicated by Belgrade dispatches of DNB, official German news agency, stressing Macek's indecision and noting the political differences between the Serbs and Croats, largest individual segments of the quilt-work kingdom of Yugoslavia.)

The governor of Croatia was understood, however, to be negotiating with Macek and the new premier, Gen. Dusan Simovic, for continued Croat representation in the cabinet.

[Police and helmeted troops with fixed bayonets last night frustrated attempted Communist demonstrations against the new government in the streets of Belgrade, the United Press reported.

[Communist pamphlets appeared accusing Premier Dusan Simovic's government of "seeking to go to war to aid imperialist England" and demanding a pact with Russia as Yugoslavia's only hope of salvation.]

It is recalled here that the "divide and conquer" tactic was used successfully by Germany against Czecho-Slovakia after Hitler's setback of May, 1938, when President Eduard Benes mobilized the Czechs to defy the Nazis.

Aware of the situation, the new government informed Germany that the pact signed last Tuesday at Vienna by the men who were overthrown two days later would be neither renounced nor ratified, but would be left dangling while Yugoslavia maintained "full and absolute" neutrality toward everyone.

This amounts to outright repudiation, and high diplomatic sources said the Germans had been told flatly that compliance was "impossible because it would be contrary to the will of the Yugoslav people."

This answer to an "urgent" demand for a statement of the Yugoslav attitude was unsatisfactory to Germany. The German Minister, Viktor von Heeren, was reported autharitatively tonight to have delivered a new two-point note protesting the beating of Germans and demanding a satisfactory written declaration of the Yugoslav position, reminding the government that Germany considers the pact binding.

King Swears to Keep Unity

On the other hand, United States Minister Arthur Bliss Lane delivered formally an American proffer of full aid to Yugoslavia in resisting aggression, and the young King Peter swore on the cross to "keep forever the unity of the nation" and its independence.

The Turkish Minister was reported to have proposed to Premier Simovic a mutual assistance pact.

The Germans were pictured as electing to reserve their military power as a last resort, but German quarters said nearly 3,000 German trade delegates, economic experts and journalists were leaving the country quickly.

It was learned tonight that German civilians living in Belgrade would be removed Monday on a Danube River boat to Vienna. Only diplomatic representatives and persons here on urgent business will remain.

Troops stood guard at the German and Italian legations. A German attache said the German legation was filled with nearly all his countrymen who remained in Belgrade, all fearful that to venture outside would be to invite beatings.

Pagentry in the Cathedral

But to the jubilant Belgrade public, the center of the universe today was not in the council chambers or the frontier redoubts, but the altar of the Serb Orthodox Cathedral in Belgrade.

There 17-year-old King Peter stood in the bright uniform of a general of aviation.

Peter reverently kissed it and solemnly intoned:

"I, Peter the Second, ascending to the throne of the Kingdom of Yugoslavia and taking over royal power, swear by God the Almighty that I will keep forever the unity of the nation, the independence of the country, and the integrity of state territory."

The rest of the government took their oaths amid noisy confusion.

The United States and British ministers, who attended, had to fend off good-naturedly the handshakes and kisses of the crowd when they entered the cathedral.

"Long Live America!"

As they filed out afterward, they were almost overwhelmed by well-wishers.

German Minister von Heeren arrived for the ceremony and afterwards left amid a cold silence which was in marked contrast with the frenzied ovations accorded the American, British and Russian diplomats.

United States Military Attache Col. Louis Fortier was elevated to the shoulders of sturdy Serbs amid exclamations of "Long Live Roosevelt! Long Live America!"

The crowd knew that United States Minister Lane had offered American aid and that he told Premier Simovic and Foreign Minister Momtchilo Nincic on behalf of President Roosevelt that the Yugoslav coup had caused "an immediate and popular reaction in America," that it was "a matter of self-congratulation for every liberty-loving man and woman."

The pro-German newspaper Vreme assumed a pro-British tone. Its editor, Danilo Gregoric, who went to Germany to prepare the way for the Axis pact, was reported under arrest.

The government was hastening to solidify its position outside the Axis orbit.

One prominent citizen summed up the public attitude in this fashion:

Fears Loss of Home Rule

Friends of Macek said he was fearful that everything he had fought for through years of bitter opposition might be swept away by the apparent renewed ascendancy of the Serb military leaders backed by the Orthodox Church.

He was represented as fearing that Premier Simovic, King Peter and the church might seek to abolish the agreement for Croat home rule, reached in 1938.

The weekly paper, Srpski Glas, banned a year ago because of anti-Croat articles, appeared again, and some Croats charged it was backed by the Orthodox Church.

The overthrow of Premier Dragisa Cvetkovic occasioned no demonstrations in Zagreb, the Croat center, for the Croats considered him a friend, the first Serb politician to reach an agreement with them.

The apparent Axis decision to fish in the troubled waters of Yugoslav internal politics carries grave possibilities, and for those who put the unity of the country above all other considerations—and that means most of the responsible leaders—the internal situation transcends in importance any possible fight against aggressors or any outside aid in that fight.

Public Statement Expected

Delivery of the United States note had a notable stiffening effect in government offices as news of its contents spread quickly.

The internal problem, however, goes back to the founding of this state after the World War, with relations of the Serbs and Croats as the fundamental difficulty. The situation always has bee ncomplicated by religious and cultural differences, the Orthodox Serbs being antipathetic to the Roman Catholic Croats.

No hint leaked out of the conclusions, if any, reached at a conference tonight between Von Heeren and Foreign Minister Nincic, but it was expected that the cabinet would issue a public statement within 24 hours.

A source close to the government said some cabinet members held that "Yugoslavia should respect all outstanding agreements which are open and public."

Report Secret Clauses

This was possibly significant because there were reports after the Vienna ceremony that Yugoslavia had signed several secret clauses to the Axis pact, including a provision for passage of sealed German trains across the country, a pledge to smash anti-Axis propaganda, and "coordination" of Yugoslav economy with the Reich's.

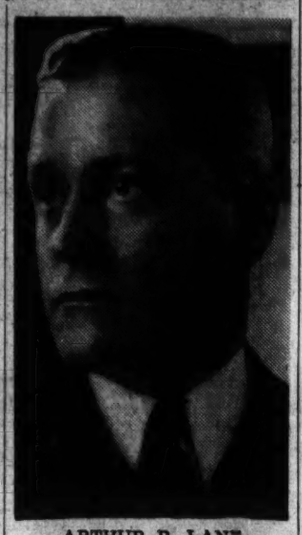
Meanwhile it was reported without official confirmation that all the old cabinet members except former Premier Cvetkovic and former Foreign Minister Aleksander Cincar-Markovic had been released.

A radio broadcast in Russia, purportedly from Moscow and heard here three times during the day, declared that Russia regarded the change in government as "the normal overthrow of a regime of thieves and gangsters."

Meanwhile, diplomats agreed that there remained a 50-50 chance for a German radio broadcast to come true: That Yugoslavia might extend the theater of war in the Balkans.

Big Part Played by U. S. Envoy In Stiffening Serb Resistance

Lane's Promises Of Aid Important In Foiling of Nazis



ARTHUR B. LANE

Arthur Bliss Lane, America's Minister to Yugoslavia, played "an important part" in the dramatic governmental upheaval that blew the Balkan kingdom out of the grip of the Axis, State Department officials said yesterday.

The 46-year-old career diplomat's forceful presentation of Washington's attitude encouraged the anti-Nazi leaders of the South Slavs to seize power, knowing they would receive American aid equal at least to that going to Greece under the Lease-Lend Act, it was said here.

Officials recalled that Lane last week conferred with most of Yugoslavia's leaders, including those who resigned from the cabinet and later led the revolt against the Axis pact.

The State Department refused to reveal the extent to which Lane had gone in promising American assistance to an anti-Nazi Yugoslavian government. But they emphasized that at the very least he had guaranteed that such a government would receive planes, guns, shells and other materiel from the United States if it should request aid.

The "American attitude" which the envoy presented so successfully to the Serb and Croat leaders before the revolt was defined most clearly by Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles Thursday, after the revolt one high official declared.

Welles, in diplomatic terminology, said he had instructed Lane to promise the new Yugoslav government moral support and material aid under the Lease-Lend Act in the event of Axis aggression. He added that news of the coup d'etat was received with deep satisfaction by the United States.

All Calm, He Phones

Everything was reported calm in Belgrade, with order being maintained perfectly, by Lane in a telephone conversation late yesterday with Ray Atherton, chief of the European division of the State Department. It was the first opportunity afforded for free communication since the revolt.

Lane was reached by telephone after a brief telegraphic report, which was delayed in transmission and was dated Thursday, had been received from him by the department. This said that he had seen the new foreign minister very briefly and planned to confer with the prime minister and foreign minister yesterday.

In his telephone conversation yesterday he said that no American interests had been interfered with or adversely affected and that enthusiasm continued at high pitch. He added that he had called on members of the new government.

Lane, who has been Minister to Yugoslavia since August, 1937, fought Nazi economic pressure on Belgrade before the outset of the European war. State Department officials said he negotiated "brilliantly" for a reciprocal trade agreement with Yugoslavia, although it was never consummated.

The stocky, curly-haired envoy went to the Balkans after a year as Minister to Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania. From 1933 to 1936 he was American minister to Nicaragua, one of the youngest men in the career service with the rank of minister. Earlier, he was counselor of the American Embassy in Mexico City.

A native of Brooklyn, N. Y., Lane received part of his early education in France and later was graduated from Yale University. After a year in the Connecticut National Guard, he became secretary to American Ambassador Thomas Nelson Page in Rome in 1916. He was appointed to the foreign service the following year.

After two years in Rome, Lane served in Warsaw, at the Paris Peace Conference, in Switzerland and Washington before his assignment to Mexico City as first secretary in 1925. From 1927 to 1930 he was chief of the division of Mexican affairs.

Loudspeakers Tell Italians of Coup

Athens, March 28 (AP).—With loudspeakers blaring across Albanian no-man's-lands and showers of plane-borne leaflets, Greek armies told their Italian foes today that Yugoslavia had turned against the Axis.

Serbs Spoil Nazis' Party For Matsuoka

Associated Press Staff Writer

A sour flavor apparently got into the menu of the Axis love feast in Berlin, wholly aside from Yugoslavia's refusal to come to the party. Japanese Foreign Minister Matsuoka, the guest of honor, did not have a very happy time of it apparently, nor could Italy's representatives at the festal board have been quite at ease.

If the Nazi high command was caught as much by surprise by the Belgrade coup as is indicated, it is a fact worth noting. Berlin's boasted intelligence system, the advance guard of the Fifth Column, failed it for the first time.

Nobody else was in the dark, even before the new Belgrade regime made its defiant answer to a Berlin demand for an explanation. Yugoslavian "neutrality" in the circumstances amounts to a formal challenge to Hitler, and the next move in the deadly game is up to him.

Hitler's lexicon does not include either the word neutrality in its accepted sense or the word fail. Nations not actively with him are rated against him. It is now clear that Matsuoka must have learned a lot about that during his Berlin stay.

Nazi censors have passed press reports from Berlin saying virtually that the Japanese visitor was confronted with some sort of demand that Tokyo make good on the nebulous terms of her alignment with the Rome-Berlin Axis. He has been told, it is indicated, that if Japan hopes for Axis favor for her dreams of expansion she must do something now to earn it.

Something "specific" was suggested, the Berlin reports add, very specific. An attack on Singapore, Britain's powerful Far Eastern naval base, already swarming with hard-fighting Australian defenders, was urged.

Failing such action by Japan to divert American attention to the Pacific and perhaps limit the scope of American help for Britain, it was pointedly suggested to the Japanese visitor that a victorious Axis might have small interest in handing over British Far Eastern war spoils to an inactive partner.

British Pursue Italians After Fall of Cheren

By the Associated Press

Cairo, March 28.—A prediction that "the end of the East African campaign is in sight" was voiced jubilantly tonight by British army men who reported the Italians in disordered flight down the high road to Asmara, Eritrean capital, following the British capture of Cheren, the Fascists' African "Verdun."

Uncounted thousands of prisoners and vast quantities of war stores were taken, the British announced, in the rout of the 35,000 Fascist defenders of the Eritrean mountain fortress which fell late Wednesday.

The conquering imperial forces, including a column of free French troops, swept on past the captured town and were reported close on the heels of the Fascists headed for the colonial capital, 42 miles to the southeast.

With Italian resistance at Cheren smashed after a seven-week siege and other British columns boring deeper into Ethiopia, the feeling grew in British quarters here that it wouldn't be long before Mussolini's men are thrown out of their colonial empire completely.

"All the Italians' energy went into the defense of Cheren," a British army spokesman said. "It is not unduly optimistic to prophesy that the end of the east African campaign is in sight."

He pointed out that Asmara, unlike Cheren, had few natural defenses and only scant man-made ones, unless new fortifications have been thrown up in the last 30 days.

This was taken as an indication that the army command expected little difficulty in seizing the colonial capital and pushing on to Massaua, Eritrea's only big seaport, thus completing the conquest of Italy's oldest colony.

Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell, British commander in Africa, watched the launching of the final assault on Cheren and it was occupied barely 30 minutes after his departure by air for Cairo, it was disclosed today.

The walled city of Harar in Ethiopia, which fell the same day as Cheren, was taken almost without casualties, advices from the front said.

Izaak Waltons Oppose Army Sites in Parks

The Izaak Walton League of America convention here yesterday went on record against the use of national parks as bombing ranges or sites for military training camps.

In a resolution it asserted that the parks had been "set aside as outstanding natural areas for the permanent pleasure and enjoyment of all the people."

Stating that "under the banner of national defense certain proposals have been made and are expected to be made to Congress for their use for military training camps, bombing ranges, etc.," the resolution continues. "Such use would be both unnecessary and inimical to their purpose and would tend to establish a dangerous precedent inviting further abuse of a nonmilitary nature after the present emergency." The resolution was submitted by the Fullerton, Calif., chapter.

Urges Exploitation Ban

The league also urged enactment of a United States-Canadian treaty embracing restrictions on exploitation of the Great Lakes fishing industry.

"The fisheries of the Great Lakes constitute an international resource and its preservation cannot be accomplished by one country acting alone," a resolution said.

The convention requested the United States Reclamation Bureau to install fish screens at the headgates of dams, saying the annual loss of game fish through stream diversion for irrigation in Western States "probably exceeds the annual take by anglers."

Tappan Gregory, Chicago, was reelected league president. Other officers: Secretary, William D. Cox, Chicago; treasurer, Harry F. Harper, Lansing, Mich.; vice presidents, William L. Finley, Portland, Oreg.; P. G. Platt, Wallingford, Pa.; Dr. Lewis Radcliffe, Washington, D. C.; J. H. Frenchick, Sioux City, Iowa, and J. C. Gregory, Fullerton, Calif.

Assails Pollution

A pagan philosophy was attributed as cause for pollution of America's streams by Representative Carl E. Mundt (Republican), South Dakota.

Mundt was calling for national uniform minimum standards of purity for all interstate waters "unless Americans are to continue living with a growing torrent of filth which selfish industrialists and shortsighted municipalities dump into streams and rivers under the pagan philosophy that the people down the stream can 'drink it and like it' or move upstream and join the polluters' paradise which they are supporting."

Under existing law, he asserted, "bad pollution practices drive out of existence good pollution control because they place a penalty upon decency and reward public filth and private pollution by permitting polluters in one locality to escape the costs which are involved in establishing the pollution control insisted upon by more enlightened and public-spirited communities."

Seeks Correction

He said his bill (H. R. 3778) "is an honest effort to correct the situation without drastic action, but with at least enough compulsion in it to compel deliberate and obstinate polluters to show cause why they should not avail themselves of scientifically effective and economically expedient methods of known pollution control."

The call for a common area of agreement in the development of national water resources was made by Col. C. L. Hall, Army Engineer Corps.

"The only valid reason for abridging anybody's rights and disturbing the natural conditions of our water courses is to accomplish improvements that will produce public benefits greater than the resulting damage," he said. "That is our defense for white settlement in an Indian North America."

John C. Page, United States Commissioner of Reclamation, said the conversion of almost 3,000,000 acres of desert land "into a livable habitat for wildlife" was an important phase of the Government's program to preserve game and create added recreational facilities.

At a banquet at the Willard Hotel last night speakers praised Izaac Walton League members, not only for typifying American ideals of sportsmanship, but as contributors to good government.

The convention members today will visit Congress. At 9:30 a. m. the national directors will elect board members.

Movie Magnate Pleads Guilty In Bribery Plot

Fox Faces 2 Years; U. S. Judge Davis, Kaufman Indicted

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, March 28.—United States Circuit Judge J. Warren Davis, retired; William Fox, one-time multimillionaire movie magnate, and Morgan Kaufman, former Federal bankruptcy referee, were indicted today in Federal Court on a charge of conspiracy to obstruct justice through bribery.

Fox pleaded guilty at once and was held in $5,000 bail. Bench warrants were issued for Davis and Kaufmann.

Judge Guy Bard deferred sentence of Fox until April 14, and set the same date for arraignment of the other two.

The maximum sentence is imprisonment for two years and $10,000 fine.

Involved Bankruptcy Cases

The accusation was returned by a Federal grand jury specially instructed by Attorney General Robert H. Jackson. He said his department had been informed the defendants violated the law by "corruptly influencing, obstructing and impeding and corruptly endeavoring to influence, obstruct and impede the due administration of justice."

Judge Davis retired in 1939 from the Third Circuit Court of Appeals.

The charges involved certain transactions in the bankruptcy adjudication of corporations formed by Fox.

Before the 1929 market crash, the former motion picture executive's financial empire was estimated at $35,000,000. In 1936 he filed a petition in bankruptcy claiming liabilities of $9,935,261 and assets of $100 in cash.

The indictment noted that Judge Davis sat in many appeals that came before the court in the Fox bankruptcy actions—and that in these Davis would "corruptly render his individual judgment . . . without regard to the merits" of the cases.

Appointed by Wilson

Former Judge Davis, who is 74, was appointed to the circuit court bench by President Wilson in 1920, serving 19 years. His home is at Lawrenceville, N. J.

The 62-year-old Fox made reasonably sure before he went to court that he would be able to make bail.

Held in $5,000, he stepped up to the clerk of court, pulled a roll from his pocket and from it stripped five $1,000 bills.

Die Is Cast, Says Fr. Walsh Of U. S. Policy

"Nonintervention no longer controls American foreign policy, nor can it ever again do so. There is a complete break with the past," said the Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., vice president of Georgetown University, and regent of the School of Foreign Service, last night in his lecture series in Memorial Continental Hall.

"The events of the last few days in the Balkans, and the reaction to them by the Government of the United States, demonstrates how completely the world revolution has modified our foreign policy," he said.

"There is no turning back now, or faltering. By the Lend-Lease Act and by the daily application of it to England, Greece, China and Yugoslavia we have voluntarily identified our future with the success or failure of their cause. The penalty of defeat, on the other hand, would be such that we risk being reduced to a second or third rate power, granted the mentality and capacity for resentment in that hypothetical victor, aided and abetted by his allies, none of whom loves us. We would constitute the richest booty on the face of the earth. Make up your minds, therefore, for a superhuman effort."

Turning toward the Pacific, he said: "If Australia were to be attacked, every indication points to a . . . visit of the American fleet to Melbourne and Sydney, with decks cleared for action. And should Singapore be assaulted, I hazard the belief that the Government of the United States is prepared to prevent its capitulation to Japan."

FBI Police School To Graduate 38

Thirty-eight law enforcement officers, students at the sixteenth session of the FBI National Police Academy, will be graduated at 10:30 a. m. today at the Department of Justice.

Diplomas will be presented by Acting Attorney General Matthew F. McGuire. The class will be addressed by Representative Clifford A. Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, and Nelson A. Rockefeller, State Department coordinator of commercial and cultural relations with South American republics.

The current class will bring the academy's total graduates to 553 since it was started in 1935. Officers attending the sixteenth session represent 24 States and the Panama Canal Zone.

British Air And Sea Units Slash at Axis

Rhineland, French Coast Hard Hit; 2 Ships Torpedoed

By the Associated Press

London, March 28.—British air and sea forces reported heavy blows to German arsenals and Italian supply lines tonight, while on the home front Great Britain acknowledged civilian casualties of nearly 70,000 since the war started.

The R. A. F. blasted the great Rhineland industrial centers of Cologne and Duesseldorf and the German-held French "invasion ports" of Dunkerque, Brest and Calais, the air ministry announced.

In the Mediterranean, the admiralty said, the submarine Parthian torpedoed a 6,000-ton supply or troop ship and a 10,000-ton tanker in an Italian convoy off southern Italy.

With only a brief daylight alarm in London, the first since the night of March 20, Britain continued to enjoy a virtual respit from German attacks which Ellen Wilkinson, parliamentary secretary of the home security ministry, disclosed had killed 28,859 civilians since the start of the war.

The seriously injured, Miss Wilkinson said at Newcastle, totaled 40,166. Without revealing the exact number of military casualties, she said the ratio of civilian to service deaths was 50 to 1.

Shortly after this report, the air ministry news service, in a review of British air activity over Germany, declared 1,000 persons were killed and 7,000 injured in recent raids on Bremen, German port and industrial center.

In night attacks on Hannover, the report added, 250 persons were killed, 250 houses destroyed and 500 seriously damaged and an area in the town center laid waste by explosives and incendiaries.

The air ministry communique said planes of the bomber command, after a day of harassing raids on German naval and supply ships along the coast from the Frisian Islands to Brittany, swept inland at night to drop heavy bombs with "good results."

Fires and explosions in railroad yards and factories at Duesseldorf and Cologne were reported by returning pilots.

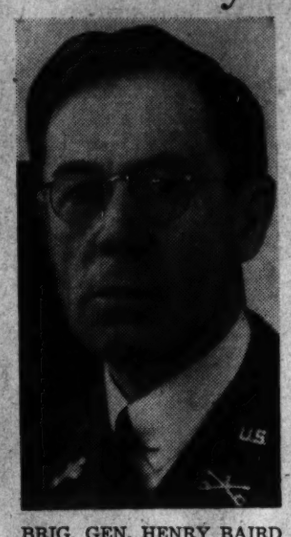
Two More Armored Divisions To Be Created Immediately

BRIG. GEN ALVAN GILLEM



BRIG. GEN. HENRY BAIRD

By John G. Norris

Immediate organization of two additional armored divisions, bringing the number of such units to four, was announced yesterday, as official Army sources disclosed that equipment for eight full tank divisions will be available by early fall.

Announcement of the organization of the two new divisions more than two months ahead of schedule came as the Senate Appropriations Committee approved a $4,389,284,174 supplemental defense supply bill. Funds for greatly expanding Army pilot training and constructing new defense office buildings here were added by the group.

The new armored division, each contining about 400 tanks and 12,000 men, will be set up at Camp Polk, La., and Pine Camp, N. Y. Some 7,500 trained men will form the nucleus of the units, which will be filled out by selectees and recruits.

Officials said the advancement of the organization of the Third and Fourth armored divisions had been made possible by a recent stepping up in production of light (12-ton) tanks. The output is now understood to be six a day.

Commercial production of medium (25-ton) tanks will begin in July, making possible establishment of ten additional General Headquarters tank battalions. There are now five such units.

The huge fifth supplemental defense bill approved by the Senate committee carries contract authority for purchasing numbers of heavy tanks—monsters of 50 to 60 tons.

A net total of $315,474,100 was added to the bill by the committee. Bulk of the increase—$312,871,100—will go for additional schools and facilities for increasing the annual output of pilots to 30,000 and that of air mechanics to 100,000.

The Army is now training fliers at a rate of 7,000 a year and is in the process of stepping this rate up to 12,000 annually by November. Training of enlisted technicians is now being increased to 45,000 a year.

For construction of additional office buildings for defense agencies the committee added $4,100,000. This will provide 700,000 additional square feet of office space in two-story structures to be located on Government-owned land in Washington or nearby Maryland or Virginia.

Other changes added $663,000 for improvement of the Kennebec River, Me., to facilitate destroyer operations near the Bath Iron Works, and $1,640,000 for a flood-control project in East Hartford, Conn., where aircraft construction work has been halted by floods.

The bill carries $1,000,000,000 for building 3,600 additional bombers for the Army, and $548,000,000 for new arms plants to supply an Army of 4,000,000 men.

In announcing the formation of the two additional armored divisions, the War Department named commanders for the new units. Brig. Gen. Alvan C. Gillem, jr., now with the Second Armored Division at Fort Benning, Ga., will head the Third Division at Camp Polk, while Brig. Gen. Henry W. Baird, now of the First Armored Division at Fort Knox, Ky., will command the Fourth Division at Pine Camp, N. Y.

Both officers have had considerable experience with tanks, and both rose from the ranks. Gillem, a Tennesseean, has been in the Infantry, while Baird, a native of Kent Island, Md., is a former Cavalryman.

"We had neither been drinking alcoholic beverages nor had we ordered any in that place and we had conducted ourselves, as usual, in a manner becoming a lady and a gentleman."

Gen. Reckord said he intended to ask the manager of the hotel "for a specific statement with respect to the incident" and intimated that if the report is borne out in its entirety he might ask officers of the division to remain away from the hotel.

Old Boy Scout Uniforms Sought

Outgrown and unused Boy Scout uniforms will be collected next week by the Washington Junior Board of Commerce in cooperation with the National Capital Area Council to provide uniforms for Scouts needing them. Persons wishing to donate all or parts of uniforms may contact the Scout headquarters, 1727 K Street Northwest.

Pajamas With Feet Bow in Los Angeles

Los Angeles, March 28 (AP).—For that midnight snack—jiffy-jamas.

Men's pajamas with feet made their debut at a fashion show last night. They were conceived by Bill Henry, chilly-toed columnist of the Los Angeles Times.

Florida Pastor Starts Revival Series Monday

One of the outstanding evangelistic preachers of the South, Dr. Thomas Hansen, of the Main Street Baptist Church, Jacksonville, Fla., will begin a series of revival services on Monday at Brookland Baptist Church. The services will continue twice daily, at 10 a. m. and 7:45 p. m., except Saturday, through April 11.

Metropolitan. Evangelistic services will continue until April 6 each night except Saturday at 7:30. The Rev. Bronwen Davies Clifford, of Philadelphia, is the evangelist. Mr. Clifford, while only in his 20's, has held many successful campaigns in many large cities. He will preach tomorrow morning on "Show Me a Penny" and in the evening on "Love, Courtship and Marriage."

At 10:30 p. m. Mr. Clifford and the choir will be heard over Radio Station WINX.

His subjects for the week are as follows:

Monday, "Will the U. S. Enter the War?"

Tuesday, "Why Britain Cannot Lose the War."

Wednesday, "The Tale That is Told."

Thursday, "I Hear a Rhapsody."

Friday, "The Painted Female."

Fifth. Dr. John E. Briggs will preach at 11 a. m. tomorrow on "God's Compassion for the Lost as Illustrated by the Prophet Jonah." At 7:45 p. m. the Rev. J. Herrick Hall will deliver the second sermon of the series on "The Tears of Jesus."

Forty cottage prayer meetings will be held Friday night in different sections of the city and in nearby Maryland and Virginia in preparation of the pre-Easter revival meetings from April 6 to 13.

First. "Life Triumphant" will be the topic of Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden's sermon tomorrow at 11 a. m. The senior choir will sing Caesar Franck's "Psalm One Hundred and Fifty." At the evening service the youth choir will sing Beethoven's "The Heavens Are Declaring," and Dr. Pruden will preach on "The Sustaining Presence."

Calvary. Youth Week, which has been in progress at Calvary Church since Monday, will reach its climax in the services tomorrow. The Youth Week minister, Leo Berndt, will preach at the morning service on the subject, "Youth and Christian Attitudes." The assistant for Youth Week, Richard Thomason, will occupy the pulpit at the evening service. His subject will be "Do Ye Not Remember?" He will be assisted by Donald and Winifred Thomas. Donald Chase will be the minister of music, and Mrs. Marian Chase the organist.

Takoma. "Consider Him That Endured," will be the sermon theme of the Rev. William E. La Rue at the morning services tomorrow. In the evening the Rev. Perry L. Mitchell will begin a series of pre-Easter evangelistic services which will be held nightly, except Saturday, until April 6.

Chevy Chase. "Design for Living" will be the title of the message by the Rev. Edward O. Clark tomorrow at the 11 a. m. services. The chorus choir will sing.

The Rev. Sanford C. Mills will speak in the evening service on the subject, "In the Ghettos of New York."

Church Pupils To Give Program At Mount Pleasant

Pupils of the Third Hour Church School of Mount Pleasant Congregational Church will present a program on "The Migrants of History" tomorrow at 9:30 a. m. in the church school. Dr. Fred S. Buschmeyer will speak at 11 a. m. on "Living Under Orders."

Ingram Memorial. "Master, Where Dwellest Thou?" will be the sermon topic of the Rev. Frederick J. Bishop at the 11 o'clock service tomorrow.

Cleveland Park. At the 5 o'clock vesper service, Dr. Fred Sherman Buschmeyer will be guest preacher.

Paul W. Yinger will preach at the 11 o'clock service in the fifth in the series of Lenten sermons on the Lord's Prayer. His subject will be "The Grace of God."

First. Dr. Howard Stone Anderson will preach at 11 a. m. on "The Test of Friendship."

At the service at 8 o'clock, Dr. Anderson will give a dramatic reading of "The Terrible Meek." To create a proper atmosphere, it will be presented in darkness.

Dr. Glenn to Speak

Dr. C. Leslie Glenn will preach at next week's daily noonday lenten services at St. John's Church on the subject of the Gospel of St. John. There will be congregational singing of hymns and reading of the gospel, a copy of which will be given the worshippers. Services for tomorrow will begin at 8 a. m., with holy communion at 9:30 and 11 a. m.

Church Editor Back

St. Sophia's Costumed Greek Choir

Calvary Church to Dedicate Chancel Furnishings Tomorrow

Calvary Methodist Church, which has been undergoing an extensive interior redecoration program since last November, will dedicate its new cancel furnishings tomorrow.

The Rev. Orris G. Robinson, pastor, has announced that Dr. G. Ellis Williams, D.D., superintendent of the West Washington district, and two former pastors of Calvary Methodist Church will participate in the services. They are the Rev. John T. Ensor, D.D., secretary of the City Missionary Society, Baltimore, and the Dr. James Shera Montgomery, chaplain of the House of Representatives.

Dr. Williams will deliver the sermon and conduct the consecration ceremony at 11 a. m. assisted by Dr. Ensor and Dr. Montgomery. Dr. Montgomery will preach at 8 p. m.

Improvements in the church have included installation of a new chancel, with a new communion table, pulpit, screen, wainscoting, communion rail and hymn boards. A reredos, or carved wooden screen, has been erected against the stained glass window back of the altar.

New lighting fixtures, utilizing what is called artificial skylighting, also have been provided. They are in modern Gothic, harmonizing with the architecture of the auditorium and of the chancel.

Hamline. The congregation is now in the midst of celebrating the seventy-fifth anniversary of the dedication of the first frame building, and the fifteenth anniversary of the present edifice. The service tomorrow at 11 a. m. will include a program in honor of Harry C. James, chairman of the building committee of the present edifice. Dr. Harry E. Evaul, superintendent of the Hagerstown District of the Baltimore Conference of the Methodist Church, and a former pastor, who was associated with the late Dr. Joseph T. Herson, at the time of the merging of the old Hamline and Iowa Avenue Churches in 1924, will speak. The pastor, Dr. Harry W. Burgan, will conduct the service, and the Rev. Chesteen Smith, another former pastor, and Walter W. Bastian, will participate.

On Monday at 6:30 p. m. the anniversary fellowship banquet will be held in the social hall. Dr. William R. Barnhard, executive secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches, will speak. Greetings will be brought by Dr. G. Ellis Williams and letters read from former pastors.

Chevy Chase. The Rev. Edward Gardiner Latch will preach at the 11 a. m. service in the fifth sermon of a series "Toward a More Creative Life," the title being "Managing Our Moods."

McKendree. The Rev. Samuel E. Rose will speak at 11 a. m. on "His Way of Growth," the fourth sermon in the Lenten series on "Christ's Way of Life."

First. Glenn W. Wagner, evangelist, will continue his meetings each night during the coming week with the exception of Saturday. Laymen's night will be on Monday.

Brookland. At 11 a. m. Dr. S. Paul Schilling will preach on "The Compassion of God." The evening service will be in charge of the conviviality class.

Union. Dr. John R. Edwards will preach at 11 a. m. tomorrow on "The Road to Victory." The service at 8 p. m. will be conducted by Emerson N. Zettle.

Foundry. The message at the 11 a. m. service tomorrow will be brought by the Rev. George G. Dowey, D. D., of Los Angeles, Calif., on "The Challenge of the Church." A Lenten musical service at 8 p. m. will include two anthems by the choir, "All in the April Evening," by Robertson, and "The Third Word" from "The Seven Last Words," by Dubois.

Eldbrooke. At the 11 o'clock service tomorrow Dr. Walter M. Michael will preach on "A Modern Palm Sunday Approach." Dr. Michael has chosen for his evening sermon subject, "Let Us Return."

Francis Asbury. Dr. Robin Gould will preach tomorrow at 11 a. m. on "The Christ of the Outstretched Hand," and at 8 o'clock on "Christianity and the World Order."

Emory. The Rev. Horace E. Cromer will preach tomorrow at 11 a. m. and at 8 p. m. on 'Whither Goest Thou?" and "What's On Your Mind?"

Petworth. "The Lamb of God" will be the subject of Dr. Frank Steelman's sermon at the 11 a. m. service tomorrow.

Rhode Island Avenue. In the concluding sermon of a series of Lenten messages on the general subject of "Characters About the Cross," Dr. E. A. Sexsmith will preach tomorrow at 11 a. m. on "The Two Thieves."

St. Pauls. The Rev. Charles F. Phillips will speak tomorrow at 11 a. m. on "The Many-sided Christ," and at 8 p. m. on "The Prayer Life of Jesus."

Wesley. The Rev. J. Luther Neff will preach at the 11 a. m. services tomorrow on "The Christian Power," the fourth in a group of Lenten sermons on "Highlights of the Christian Message."

Trinity. At the 11 o'clock service, the Rev. Daniel W. Justice will have as his theme, "God's Need of Us." Guests will be members of Phi Sigma Epsilon Sorority, Alpha Province. They are attending as a memorial to their deceased members, Barbara Shannon Sullivan, Frances Conn Dent and Eunice Allard.

Christ, Navy Yard. The Woman's Auxiliary of the Washington Diocese will meet at the church on Tuesday at 8 p. m. Speakers will be the Rev. Harold Lounsbury and Mrs. Hull Estabrook, chairman of the Department of Christian Social Relations. The topic will be "The City Mission."

Dr. Thurman to Speak

The speaker for the all religious service in Andrew Rankin Memorial Chapel, Howard University, tomorrow at 11 a. m. will be Dr. Howard Thurman, professor of Systematic Theology and dean of the chapel.

Park View Will Honor Late Pastor

A special memorial service honoring the Rev. Walter R. Smith, for more than 33 years the pastor of the Park View Christian Church, will be held tomorrow at 8 p. m. A bronze tablet will be unveiled and dedicated by members of the congregation. Brief talks will be made by O. L. Beardsley, Mrs. A. R. McCullough, John B. Crawford, Simon McKimmie and the Rev. J. Lloyd Block, pastor. A monument recently placed at the grave of the Rev. Mr. Smith will be symbolically unveiled and dedicated.

Third. The Rev. P. A. Cave will have for his subject at the 11 a. m. service tomorrow "A Christian Greeting." Communion will be observed.

National City. The subject of Dr. Raphael H. Miller tomorrow will be "A Plain Answer to the Most Important Question."

The Young People's Group will meet in the Vermont Avenue Building for their evening meetings. Tea will be served at 6 o'clock, followed by the program at 6:30.

Columbia Heights. Pre-Easter evangelistic services will continue tomorrow with Dr. James A. Crain of Indianapolis as guest preacher. He will speak at the morning service on "Jesus and Life's Alternatives."

Asbury Church To Mark Pastor's 10th Anniversary

The congregation of Asbury Methodist Church tomorrow will celebrate the tenth anniversary of its pastor, the Rev. Robert Moten Williams.

Dr. Williams in the morning will repeat the first sermon he preached on the first Sunday of his pastorate at Asbury from the subject, "Which King Shall Reign." At 8 p. m. he will use for his subject, "Some Things I Have Learned in Ten Years." The senior and gospel choirs will sing at both services.

Dr. Williams has received into the membership of the church more than 1,700 members; organized the first junior church among the colored churches of the city; liquidated the mortgage indebtedness on the church; completely renovated the church; entertained two sessions of the Washington Conference; organized 14 new clubs and raised more than $200,000. New members will be guests of honor at both services.

Dr. Barnhart To Speak AtRound Table

Dr. William R. Barnhart, new executive secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches, will address the Lenten Round Table program tomorrow at 8 p. m. at Our Saviour Episcopal Church, Brookland. His subject will be "What It Means to be a Christian." Dr. Charles T. Warner, rector of St. Albans Episcopal Church, will address the midweek Lenten rites on Tuesday at 8 p. m.

Ascension. Continuing the series of Lenten Sunday evening services, the Very Rev. Noble C. Powell, D. D., Dean of Washington, will preach tomorrow at 8 p. m. Newcomers to Washington are especially welcome.

St. Margaret's. At the monthly meeting of the Men's Club Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock, H. Lawrence Choate will be guest speaker. He is a well-known layman of the diocese, past national president of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew and is now serving as chairman of the finance committee of that organization.

Holy Communion will be celebrated at 7:30 a. m. tomorrow. The Rev. Armand T. Eyler will preach at 11 o'clock. Alfred Stoughton, who is in charge of Washington Cathedral publicity, will address Young People's Fellowship meeting at 7 p. m. in the Parish Hall.

St. Agnes. There will be mass tomorrow—Passion Sunday—at 7:30, 9:30 and 11 a. m., and solemn evensong, benediction and sermon at 7:30 p. m., stations of the cross will be said on Wednesday night and there will be a holy hour on Friday at 8 p. m.

Epiphany. Services for tomorrow will include holy communion at 8 a. m., church school and junior bible class at 9:30; morning prayer and sermon by Dr. ZeBarney Phillips at 11 a. m. The Young People's Fellowship will meet at 6:30 p. m. when the Rev. Hunter M. Lewis will give an address on mission work in Japan. At 8 p. m., Dr. Phillips will give the sixth lecture-sermon in the series on "Great Religions of the World."

Christ, Georgetown. The Rev. G. Freeland Peter, D. D., who is temporarily in charge of services, will preach at the 11 o'clock service tomorrow.

He will also address the Friday afternoon lenten service at 5 o'clock, when the St. Cecilia choir will sing.

Christ Church, Georgetown has had many notable names upon its register. Among others is the name of Francis Scott Key, author of the "Star Spangled Banner."

Key attended the original meeting on the tenth day of November, 1817, in the home of Thomas Corcoran for the purpose of "organizing a new congregation." Key was also a member of the committee of seven to look for and recommend a suitable site for a church.

Pastors to Ask Aid In Federation Drive

Appeals for the support of the Federation of Churches will sound from many pulpits tomorrow, as Federation Sunday is celebrated—heralding the opening of the drive for $25,000.

Walter W. Britt is campaign committee chairman. His aides are O. L. Beardsley, Dr. Dudley N. Carpenter, Daniel Dollarhide, Norton M. Little, W. Galt Mish, Frank L. Smith and A. J. Thomas. The drive will extend a week.

Dr. Pierce to Mark 40 Years As Pastor at All Souls' Church

Dr. Ulysses G. B. Pierce tomorrow will celebrate 40 years as pastor of All Souls' Unitarian Church and a half century in the Unitarian pulpit.

But in a recent interview he spoke with the enthusiasm of a new minister about Christianity, and assured that people are getting back to religion. His youthful outlook and radiant countenance make it hard to believe that he was born two months after Lincoln's assassination.

Young people are turning to religion today, he observed, because the church is affording them a fuller opportunity for self-expression. When he assumed his first pulpit in Decorah, Iowa, in 1891, he said, the tendency was for churches to pour much religion into youth, but draw nothing out.

In those days young people accepted religion authoritatively, he recalled. Today its values must be proved to them.

His church at Sixteenth and Harvard Streets Northwest has a seven-day-a-week functioning schedule for all-age groups. One of the foremost programs is the Sunday evening motion picture hour in Pierce Hall, begun in 1924, and one of the first such church-sponsored activities in the country.

Dr. Pierce believes that today's World War, just as other world crises, is bringing a surge of religion in America.

"The war is making people think, is calling them to revaluate things, and is bringing them back to the church," he said.

About the possibility of retiring he had this to say:

"I'm not going to retire as long as I can keep on my boots. The old guard dies but never surrenders."

Shortly after coming here from Ithaca, N. Y., in 1901 to preach in the former edifice at Fourteenth and L Streets Northwest, Dr. Pierce numbered among his congregation President William Howard Taft and other nationally prominent figures. Dr. Pierce was then Senate chaplain. The present church was completed in 1924.

Dr. Pierce for many years has been chairman of the board of visitors of St. Elizabeths Hospital, is a member of the boards of Howard University and Gallaudet College, and has been head of the Unitarian Association. He is dean of local clergymen.

Tomorrow's services honoring Dr. Pierce will begin with a program in the church school at 9:45 a. m., when Jesse C. Suter, assistant church school superintendent when Dr. Pierce came to Washington, will speak. Just before the pastor preaches at the 11 o'clock service on "Forty Years of Unitarianism," an instrumental prelude will be heard. A reception for Dr. and Mrs. Pierce will be held on Monday night in Pierce Hall.

"WHEN MORNING GILDS THE SKIES"
TRANSLATED BY REV. E. CASWALL
When morning gilds the skies
My heart, awaking, cries,
May Jesus Christ be praised!
Alike at work and prayer,
To Jesus I repair
May Jesus Christ be praised!

The glad notes of this favorite morning song express the joy and cheer of an awaking world. A beautiful feature is the repeated refrain, "May Jesus Christ be praised."

Cathedral Service Will Hear Naval Academy Choir

Music by the United States Naval Academy Choir from Annapolis will feature the evensong service in Washington Cathedral tomorrow at 4 p. m. The Bishop of Washington, the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, will preach. Delegates attending the annual convention of the Society of Sponsors of the U. S. Navy will attend the service in a body. Officers of the Navy Department will be invited guests of the society.

The Society of Sponsors of the Navy was organized in 1908 by Miss Mary Campbell of Alabama, who had christened the cruiser Birmingham. More than four hundred women who have since christened ships of the Navy are today members of the society. The president is Mrs. Russell C. Langdon of New York.

The Annapolis Choir will be directed by Prof. J. W. Crosley, organist and choirmaster of the Naval Academy. More than 80 midshipmen comprise the group. They will sing the entire evensong service consisting of two anthems and four hymns, closing the program with "Eternal Father Strong to Save," the Naval Academy hymn.

'Reality' Is Topic Of Christian Scientists

"Reality" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow, at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. Sunday school is at 11 a. m. All are cordially invited to attend the church services, including the Wednesday evening meetings at 8 o'clock.

The Golden Text is from Jeremiah, 51:10: "The Lord hath brought forth our righteousness: come, and let us declare in Zion the work of the Lord our God."

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "Labour not for the meat which perisheth, but for that meat which perisheth, unto everlasting life, which the Son of Man shall give unto you: for him hath God the Father sealed." (John 6:27.)

War's Aftermath to Pose Problems to U. S., Hoover Says

Special Dispatch to The Post

New Haven, Conn., March 28.—America, whether or not it takes the "final step" into war has already made "three positive appointments with destiny," Herbert Hoover declared tonight.

In a nationally broadcast speech before the New Haven Y. M. C. A., the former President said America has already made the appointment to "sit at the world's peace table."

"Another," he added, "is that we face the problem of war emotions and war psychosis. The other is that we shall meet the financial, economic and social aftermath of the war."

He called on the youth of America to consider seriously the social, economic and emotional problems that will arise from the war and reviewed the upheaval of civilization wrought by total war.

"We cannot wait until the appointments with destiny are upon us," Mr. Hoover said, presenting the questions which he said must be answered now and upon which the whole future lives of America's youth depend.

He requested his hearers to "think and think fast" on these questions:

"Are we giving aid simply to assure the independence of Britain and the others who are fighting against aggression? Or are we extending our view to remaking the world? . . .

Poses Problems

"How are we going to secure that liberty and freedom and democracy be accepted by those races whose racial instincts rebel against it? Are we going to police the world? . . .

"How are we going to assure the proper elbow room for growing people? . . .

"And here in America—

"With far more difficulties than last time, how are we going to demobilize our war Socialism and Fascism in America and restore freedom again to men?

"With far more exhausted resources than last time how are we going to provide for our own employment and economic recovery after this war

"In fact, how are we going to make a peace that will be a permanent peace?"

Hoover, asserting that "hates and fears lived on" after the Versailles treaty which "in part sowed the dragons' teeth of the present war," said the World War proved that "liberty, democracy and freedom could not be imposed on nations by battle . . . that intellectual ideas rooted in a thousand years of racial history cannot be uprooted with a machinegun."

Prays for Peace

Predicting that "hate will again also sit at the peace table" as at Versailles, Hoover continued:

"I am one who prays with all my being that America's sons should not be sent to this war.

"If God grants that we become no more deeply involved than we are today, we may be able to bring a more constructive and warning voice to the peace table. If our moral reservoirs are not drained by the full passions of war, we may bring sanity and compassion.

"If our economic resources are still partly intact, we may be able to contribute something to restore another and better world. If our faith in democracy is held high amid the storms of war economy, we may yet keep the lamp of liberty alight."

Hoover asserted that the United States "joined in an exactly parallel war 25 years ago for the same purposes and under the same impulses."

"Even with victory," he added, "we failed to get either military, economic or spiritual peace."

Describing the World War as "the first total war of modern history," the former Republican President said that "such war can apparently end only by exhaustion or revolution on one side or the other."

"And the victor in this race of exhaustion," he continued, "is only one lap behind the vanquished."

Despite "soft phrases" to cover Government coercion of industry in the last war, Hoover said, "the cold fact was that government in business was Socialism, and Government dictation to private owners was Fascism."

"Is it to be the tragic jeopardy of democracy," he asked, "that if it would go to war it must adopt the very systems which we abhor?"

Deplores Vengeance

He attributed the failure of the Versailles peace to the vengeful demands of victorious peoples pressing upon statesmen who were "not free agents."

"I recollect," Hoover said, "having had the temerity a few days after the surrender of the Germans at the armistice to say we must at once take down the food blockade on their women and children. You would perhaps be surprised if you read the universal condemnation I received, not only in the Allied countries, but in America. They demanded more starvation after the war was over. Starvation is the mother of generations of hate.

"Also remember Sherman's march to the sea. It has bred hate in our own Southern States for 80 years."

The World War, he continued, created "great vested interests and vested habits . . . which pressed for perpetuity."

"Millions held Government jobs," he declared. "The thousands of people in authority were reluctant to give up power. Factories had thrived on Government orders. Farmers liked the Government prices.

"It was only the resolution of President Wilson and the men immediately around him who forced what we now call Fascism to retreat. Nevertheless our Government remained in many kinds of business, and of more vital importance, the ideas of war Fascism remained.

"When in later years confronted with difficulties, the people demanded that the Government resume these war methods. We saw many of them reappear in soft phrases to make them look like democracy."

Strike Laws Await Efforts At Mediation

With Congressional opinion apparently simmering on the defense labor situation, it became increasingly evident yesterday that Congress is unlikely to take any anti-strike action at least until after the Easter recess.

Despite the numerous and angry statements of the last few days attacking strikes in crucial industries, informed legislators indicated that Congress would be disposed to give the newly established National Mediation Board an opportunity to prove its efficacy in clearing up labor disputes.

"Congress will be ready to go to bat if the board doesn't work out, but a reasonable time will be allowed," commented one key member.

Meanwhile, Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, declared that he thought Congress should enact "some sort of legislation to prevent strikes that interfere with the national defense."

Powers Called Ample

However, both he and Senator Russell (Democrat), of Georgia, sponsors of the provision in the Selective Service Act empowering the Government to "draft" recalcitrant industry, said they saw no need for recent proposals to broaden the law to give the Government still wider powers over plants tied up by labor troubles.

"High defense officials have stated to me that the powers are ample—and, even though they have not been exercised, it has been very useful to have them there," Russell said.

Dies Upbraids Murray

Chairman Van Nuys of the Senate Judiciary Committee observed yesterday that he hoped the Mediation Board "will accomplish the results—but it's a matter that must be settled within the next few days."

Chairman Dies of the House Committee on un-American Activities yesterday continued his daily series of attacks on alleged Communist influence in defense industries. He released a message to Philip Murray, president of the C. I. O., stating:

"You are unwilling or unable to rid your organization of Communist influences which are doing irreparable damage to the majority of your members who are not Communists and to the Nation as a whole."

Giving a long list of allegedly communistic C. I. O. leaders, Dies asked, "How can your organization in the name of labor continue your unnatural and stupid alliance with the communazi enemies of labor and democracy?"

Mediators Face First Test Today

The Vanadium conference will begin at 10 a. m., and will be followed by the meeting on the Condenser Corporation at 1 p. m. All the meetings will be closed to the public, Davis said.

Although he declined to go into detail as to the probable procedure of the panels, Davis said that if settlement were not reached by mediation, and the public issuance of findings were necessary, these would be referred by the specific panel considering the case to the full board before being released.

Davis also disclosed that if parties to the dispute took issue with a panel's findings, they could appeal to the full board.

The reason for the larger panel in the Harvester dispute, it was inferred, is because both C. I. O. and A. F. of L. interests are clashing, necessitating labor representatives from both unions as members of the group hearing the case.

Davis' appeal brought a quick answer from Fowler McCormick, second vice president of the Harvester company. He wired that various departments of the plants would be placed in operating condition beginning Monday, and that "we are asking the striking unions to join us in meeting your request for resumption of production."

Telegraphs McCormick

In a telegram almost identical to those sent to management and labor in the other disputes, Davis wired McCormick:

"The Secretary of Labor has certified to this board under executive order of the President, dated March 19, that the dispute between your company and its idle workers threatens to obstruct the production of materials essential to national defense and that the commissioners of conciliation have been unable to adjust the dispute. This board is asking you, and at the same time it is asking the workers, to take action as follows: First, that you agree today with your adversary to resume production and, second, that in any event and without fail you appear before this board, Room 3519 Social Security Building, Washington, D. C., at 10 o'clock Monday morning, March 31, so that we may try to adjust all points in dispute and settle this controversy by common agreement while production is going on and thereby speed up the production of essential defense material at this time of great national emergency."

The Harvester company's plant at Rock Falls, Ill., and the tractor works in Chicago, have been closed by C. I. O. strikes since January 20 and January 29, respectively. Its McCormick works in Chicago, and the Richmond, Ind., unit were reopened this week despite mass picketing which resulted in riots Thursday at the latter plant.

Grand Jury to Investigate

A grand jury will be asked to investigate the riot, which resulted in several injuries and the arrest of 82 strikers, it was reported from Richmond yesterday.

Although some doubt was expressed last night as to whether the labor representatives could return to Washington in time for the meetings, plans for the conferences today remained unchanged. Murray, occupied with United States Steel negotiations, has been in Pittsburgh, and Kennedy is on call in the New York soft coal contract negotiations.

Five Major Labor Disputes Settled

unnecessary. The strike, involving 1,500 workers at the company's Bridgeville, Pa., plant, was ended by an agreement understood to involve a wage increase and joint study of tonnage rates.

Besides the Bethlehem and Universal Cyclops strikes, other disputes terminated yesterday included:

The 18-day-old C. I. O.-U. A. W. strike of the Midland Steel Products Corporation at Detroit, stoppage of whose operations necessitated shut-downs as several auto plants in the Detroit area, owing to lack of parts, and threatened closure of the entire Michigan auto industry.

2,400 Back on Job

The 24-hour shutdown of the Babcock and Wilcox Tube Co., of Beaver Falls, Pa., where the S. W. O. C. withdrew pickets after a membership drive and allowed the plant's 2,400 workers to resume operations on defense orders.

At Gary, Ind., the S. W. O. C., without announcing a reason, withdrew pickets from the gates of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation mills, and allowed workers to enter and depart unmolested. Pickets had been assigned to bar entrance to workers without paid-up union cards.

A threatened strike at the Fairfield sheet mill of the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Co., in Birmingham, Ala., was temporarily averted when S. W. O. C. leaders agreed to conitne work indefinitely beyond a deadline originally set for tonight.

The strike at Johnstown, where 15,000 are employed, began yesterday morning when voting commenced for officers of the Employes Representation Plan, an organization ordered dissolved by the National Labor Relations Board. The board's order, issued in August, 1939, is being appealed.

Five hours after the walkout began, James Gent, subregional S. W. O. C. director, reported that 8,000 employes had quit work, that there was an 80 per cent shutdown and that the plant was "100 per cent closed as to production."

Sidney B. Evans, management representative, however, asserted, "we are still making steel." He said the number of men who walked out was relatively small and that no single department was completely down.

No Violence Reported

There was no violence in connection with the strike. The union had warned its members against the sort of activity which brought about State police intervention Tuesday at the Bethlehem plant.

The strike began only two hours after the end of the dispute at the company's parent plant.

The terms of the Bethlehem plant settlement, ratified at a union mass meeting, were announced by S. W. O. C. Organizer John Riffe as follows:

1. All strikers to be returned to their jobs without loss of seniority or without discrimination whatsoever.
2. The company to continue to meet and deal with representatives of its employes in collective bargaining.
3. All dealings to be without discrimination. The company to continue to deal with the Steel Workers Organizing Committee as a collective bargaining agency for its members and to accord it equal privilege and opportunities, including a mutually acceptable manner of handling grievances (wages, working conditions, etc.).
4. Further action with reference to the selection of an exclusive bargaining agency to await final disposition of the case pending in the court."

Fifth Demand Isn't Mentioned

These terms were, in effect, merely a restoration of conditions which prevailed before the strike. The union's fifth demand, the disestablishment of the ERP, was not directly referred to. Riffe hailed the settlement jubilantly, however, and pointed out it was the first union agreement ever obtained from the company.

From Milwaukee, Wis., yesterday came news that the Allis-Chalmers plant, strike-bound for 65 days, had opened its doors to employes and was resuming operations in response to orders issued Wednesday by Navy Secretary Knox and OPM Director Knudsen.

Company officials said 1,962 of the plant's 7,800 workers had returned. Union leaders denied the figure, claiming that watchers stationed at the gates had counted only a few returning workers.

Hopes Blasted

Hope that the striking union, a local of the C. I. O. auto workers, would agree to the back-to-work call was blasted yesterday morning. At a mass meeting Union President Harold Christoffel again warned that any who returned to work would lose their union membership, and subsequently their jobs "after we win this strike."

A union meeting was called for 9 a. m. today to consider the Government's plea that the workers return to their jobs and negotiate the dispute while turning out vital defense needs.

The company officials said that the plant would be closed officially today to avoid interference with attendance at the union meeting. However, owing to the pressure of important defense orders, a spokesman said, arrangements were being made to permit employes to come to work either after the meeting or for their full day's shift.

Principal development on the threatening front of coal field labor was the summoning of a general meeting in New York Monday of C. I. O. United Mine Workers executives by the union president, John L. Lewis. The gathering will receive a report on negotiations for a new contract for coal mining in the Appalachian area to replace the one expiring Monday midnight.

$1-a-Day Pay Rise Sought

Lewis said there was "nothing specific" to report on negotiations so far, but that he wanted about 80 union leaders to be in readiness for any conclusions that might be reached over the weekend.

Meantime, as the deadline approached, labor-management conferees went into the eleventh day of negotiations on the principal issue of whether the 330,000 miners in the area would receive the $1 a day wage increase demanded by Lewis. The former C. I. O. president has announced that if the deadline is passed without a contract being signed, the miners will automatically stop work.

Airliner Crash Laid to Pilot

The Civil Aeronautics Board found yesterday that the crash of a United Air Lines plane at Chicago, December 4, in which crew members and seven passagengers were killed, was due to the failure of Capt. Philip Scott, the pilot, to exercise the necessary "caution and skill."

Capt. Scott, the board said, failed to do what was needed to avert a stall, and made an error in judgment in choosing the short northwest runway at the Municipal Airport for a landing.

Refrigeration Groups To Hear About Patents

Interesting patents pertaining to refrigeration will be discussed by Robert A. O'Leary, United States Patent Office, before the Baltimore-Washington section of the American Society of Refrigerating Engineers at a dinner meeting at 1412 New York Avenue tonight.

"Mood conditioning" of theater patrons by use of odors and their reaction to these odors will be discussed by Milton Kellscher, air-conditioning engineer, Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. L. L. Lewis, Syracuse, N. Y., national president of the society, also will address the meeting.

Chapel Dedication

The chapel of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church will be dedicated in a series of services on Monday through Friday nights, with Holy Communion service for Young People, members of the Board of Stewards and families, the choir, the children of the Junior Church and members of the Woman's Society of Christian Service.

Dr. John W. Rustin will preach at the 8:30 and 11 o'clock services tomorrow on "Christianity in Action." Deane Shure will direct the choir in the singing of the anthem, Mozart's "Hallelujah" from "Motet Exultate" at the 11 o'clock service. The Rev. Wilber H. Wilson will preach on "Looking Toward Palm Sunday" at the Junior Church service in the chapel.

'The Sea Wolf' Takes on New Dimensions at Earle

Edward G. Robinson, Ida Lupino, John Garfield Lend Old London Standby New Power, Appeal; Harry Anger Is Star of His 'Stage' Revue

NEVER BEFORE in the four of five times it has been picturized has "The Sea Wolf" been given such moving screen treatment as in the new Warner Brothers celluloid version now on view at the Earle Theater.

BELL.

Heretofore, the late Jack London's blood-red fiction of Wolf Larsen, pirate of the sealing-grounds, has been utilized by the cameras as a simple exercise in physical brutality. In the present edition, it becomes a psychological study that inevitably must suggest something of the vigorous action of the recent "The Long Voyage Home" and the taut stretching of the nerves that was exerted more remotely by "Mutiny on the Bounty." Wolf Larsen, it seems, was a victim of an inferiority complex, an enormous egomania—if those two can be made to go together, and, after all, we are not a psychiatrist—and a murderous will to rule, no matter whom he had to kill to keep his reign intact in the kingdom of his ship. New values have been added to the story by the shrewd uses to which Adaptor Robert Rossen has put the London book.

Having read the book some 35 or 40 years ago, perhaps I do not remember its original contours too clearly. But it seemed to me yesterday, in viewing the film, that Mr. Rossen has taken a few dramatic licenses that add immeasurably to the power of a tale that always was powerful in a cruel and bloodthirsty sort of way. For instance, he has made Humphrey Van Weyden, the young writer smacked into San Francisco harbor by the collision of the ferryboat and Mr. Larsen's schooner, the Ghost, the psychoanalyst of Mr. Larsen's peculiarly perverted complexes, and has injected a fugitive from the law as the chief love interest of Ruth Brewster, also sought by the police. At any rate, out of his readjustment of a yarn that has come down through the years as one of London's best, he has evolved a film play that deserves the scrutiny of anyone with a stomach for strong meat.

"The Sea Wolf," in its present reincarnation, has been given the benefits of splendid casting, a particularly vivid "atmospheric" investiture and compact and compelling direction. It still reeks with the blood spilled by angry fists, homicidal knives and a few malicious marlin spikes, but it also embodies qualities that so far transcend the mere business of tempestuous brawling as to command the interested attention of all playgoers who like a little substance in their celluloids. At this advanced age, "The Sea Wolf" may be a trifle ambitious in hoping to be denominated a great picture, but, at least, it is an exceptionally well-made and gripping one.

Edward G. Robinson in the newly expanded title role is a fine selection for the part, despite the fact that it has been variously suggested that in stature he does not quite fulfill the requirements of the bruising character he is called upon to play. Stature seems to me to have nothing to do with it. Mr. Robinson projects a character study that is arresting by the very stimulus of its contradictions. Ida Lupino, as the escaped convict in the case, and John Garfield, as the other one, compound a degree of romantic and melodramatic interest that is stunning in its directness and the gentle uses to which it can put violence. Alexander Knox, a new and welcome apparition to these eyes, as Van Weyden, the shanghaied author, speaking with an appropriate Oxonian accent, does a superlative piece of work in offering Wolf Larsen his only intellectual competition. Gene Lockhart, the degenerated ship's doctor, with a tremendous desire to regain something of his former prestige, offers a particularly eloquent portrayal of great talents gone to decay. There are many others in the cast—in fact, its full roster—who contribute greatly to the inescapable impact of a story that somehow manages to be still new, as old as it is. Foremost among them are Barry Fitzgerald, Stanley Ridges and Francis McDonald.

The "Stage" revue at the Earle this week is, above all else, another demonstration of Managing Director Harry Anger's ability to make much of little. With the exception of his headline act, "The Singing Powers Models," Mr. Anger's material is well known to Washington. Joe and the indestructible Jane McKenna compile much comedy out of their familiar routines, with Joe acting as master of ceremonies for most of the proceedings. Brack and Maysy—or the other way around—do extraordinary things on unicycles and Eileen Ritter and the Roxyettes, back from their brief vacation, really "go to town" in a succession of their most effective cavortings. But those Powers models are worth anybody's eyes and ears.

Jo Lombardi's music, the slightly amplified "Sing-a-Song-with-Mike" business, presided over by the galvanic Ritter, and the newsreel augment a feature that is a sagaciously salty item.

This Is the 'Wild and Woolly!'

COW COUNTRY GOES STREAMLINED
These would be Gertrude Messenger, Wanda McKay, Ella Neal and Cheryl Walker, presumably left to right, or maybe in reverse, in the dude ranch outfits in which they will be seen in Paramount's production of "Las Vegas Nights," which will be coming along to a local screen in due course. Phil Regan and Bert Wheeler, two old wheelhorses, shoulder the masculine burden in this subject

Leonard Lyons:

McCALL'S MAGAZINE retained Sarra, the photographer, to make a picture of pigeons-on-a-walk. The cameraman indicated that he would use stuffed pigeons as models. But Henry Dreyfuss, the designer for McCall's, insisted upon the realistic touch—live models—Sarra therefore ordered two crates of live pigeons. He tied strings around their legs and nailed the string ends to a window ledge. He was distressed by this extra labor, and when the job was over he sent the two crates of pigeons to Dreyfuss' apartment. The messenger arrived with his burden, entered the apartment, opened the crates, released the pigeons there—and left.

WHEN THE PRESIDENT sets up his Office of Emergency Management it will supervise OPM, Home Defense and Price Control. Harry Hopkins will be the director in charge of the whole works . . . Josette Daly, the debutante who was selected by the Fashion Academy as one of the six best-dressed women in America, didn't appear in the group picture taken of the winners, which was released to the press. Miss Daly didn't arrive at the Waldorf in time for the picture because she didn't know what to wear.

MRS. SELINE YORK, who was a fashion writer in Paris for 30 years, returned to America last week. She confesses that she doesn't recognize a single street in New York and that every building seems strange to her—except Grace Church, whose whiteness remains unchanged, while the rest of the town became grayer . . . She lived on the left bank in Paris, in a house where Mary Garden, the opera star, also was a tenant. On the day the Nazis arrived, while a pall of smoke descended upon the left bank, she saw Mary Garden, wearing a chic hat and gown, sitting on a straight-back chair in the center of the open doorway . . . "Mary," we've all been ordered to go into the cellar, where it's safest," Mrs. York told . . . "You may go downstairs if you want to," Mary Garden insisted, "but here I stay till Paris dies."

THE MYSTERY of the men-from-Thailand at the Hotel Victoria here was solved yesterday. They're here to promote the movie, "King of the White Elephant," which was made in their country . . . The other mystery of the week—Jan Valtin's unannounced Mutual broadcast from Washington—was preceded by an unusual stir in Washington. PM's Washington dispatch read "the plans for the broadcast became known, despite ardent attempts of WOL and Mutual officials to keep it as quiet as possible" and that the tip-off resulted in a visit to the studio by a Department of Justice functionary, as well as a cancellation of the plan to have Valtin interviewed by Walter Compton, the Presidential announcer.

KATHARINE CORNELL'S production of George Bernard Shaw's "Doctor's Dilemma" is playing to standees, a fact which should revive the playwright's faith in the drama . . . Shaw didn't have that faith last year, when he was one of the eminent men to whom Margie Hart, the strip teaser, sent a letter asking them to suggest a nicer sounding word than "strip-teaser" . . . Shaw returned her letter—but at the bottom was scribbled this note: "As long as more people will pay admission to a theater to see a naked body than to see a naked brain, the drama will languish."

NOEL COWARD'S busy itinerary, arranged by the Ministry for his trip to Australia, included this one item: "12:45 to 1:30—Free Time, to be spent as you please" . . . Fred F. Finklehoffe, the "Brother Rat" author, now at MGM, wrote a description of his Bucks County, Pa., farm, which he planned to sell. Among the advantages he enumerated was: "It is located only 69¼ kilometers from Jack White's 18 Club on West Fifty-second Street" . . . Larry Adler, the harmonica player, will appear at Roxy's, during the run of the movie, "Pot o' Gold." "Too Bad," the manager told Adler, "but for the first time, we're showing a movie in which there's a good harmonica solo. Jimmy Stewart plays the solo, in the picture. It'll be competition for you." Adler investigated—and learned that Stewart's solo was dubbed in, and that it really was played by Larry Adler's brother.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, March 28.

Like Gwendolyn, the beautiful ribbon clerk in the melodramas, many of our leading men have been cursed with fa-tal bee-yooty.

HOPPER

A handsome facade frequently helps, but many of the male stars have found that when beauty fades, nobody wants last night's gardenias. Of course, some hang on, making love to girls young enough to be their grandchildren, which gets a little bit sticky at times.

A difficult love scene between Barbara Stanwyck and Joel McCrea was ruined by ringing of phone on "Pioneer Woman" set. Director Bill Wellman now hires a guy to stand by and keep the phone quiet.

Old "Scoops" Ted Lloyd of Radio Daily, husband of glamourous Esther Ralston, is spinning around town like a whirling dervish, gathering, collecting and scattering scoops. He's a guy who gives for what he gets.

After 19 years Bill Powell and his mustache have pffft! Even Bill isn't a good enough actor to do a gag female impersonation in "Love Crazy" while wearing his wind-wooing alfalfa.

I was mean enough to say that Alice Faye shouldn't have played the part of a baroness in "That Night in Rio." The next time I saw Alice, she said, "Maybe you were right, Hedda." It's this attitude that makes everyone from prop boys to producers call Alice "Sweetheart."

Jerome Kern was watching Anna Neagle do a dance sequence for "Sunny" with Ray Bolger, and when Anna started her dancing, Jerry exclaimed, "Good Lord! She's got legs—and beauties, too!" Jerry had never seen her except as Queen Victoria. Neagle went through those routines with Ray so beautifully that no one except Director Wilcox knew she was working with a pulled muscle and strained ligament.

Joan Fontaine and Auriol Lee were about to do a scene outside a book shop in "Before the Fact," and Director Alfred Hitchcock was warning Auriol to watch her feet. Auriol looked over his rotunda and said, "How long has it been since you've been able to see yours?"

RKO-Keith's

A spice of naughtiness—just a whiff—is what makes "Nice Girl?" such a nice picture that it promises to linger on the RKO-Keith screen for weeks on end.

Being "just a nice girl" gets awfully monotonous, according to the the thesis of "Nice Girl?" Everyone loves Deanna Durbin, but also they take her for granted. Her sisters sizzle around with boy friends and amateur dramatics. Her one boy friend regards her more as a habit than his big thrill. To the neighbors she's just a sweet girl who sings around the house and feeds rabbits.

But Deanna's really fed up herself, fed up with being a patsy and just background for every person in her life except her daddy, who's also her best friend and played superbly by Bob Benchley. So when Franchot Tone arrives in the picture as the most elegant scientist you've ever seen, Deanna flings herself at him, manages to get entangled into spending a night at his apartment. When she rolls home at daylight, wearing a red dress that would look suitable on Gypsy Rose Lee, she gives the neighbors something to talk about for months. She's no longer "just a nice girl." She's a young person to be reckoned with and wondered about. Even though she's still a perfect innocent.

"Nice Girl?" is all feathery, frothy comedy with a hearty and happy background of family life and collegiate romping around. Deanna's songs are of the simpler sort that appeal to everyone, with "Perhaps" a standout in lilting quality. The little Durbin is growing up fast, but she's still sweetly girlish.

MARY HARRIS.

Quality, that's the ward for "Vivacious Lady," making it, aged 3 years, the most amusing show in town. Because its costars, Ginger Rogers and James Stewart, won this year's Academy Awards for their work in subsequent films, this has seemed a happy time for a revival at the Metropolitan. For which let there be dancing in the streets.

Even so memorable a comedy might well lack luster after three such crowded years, but "Vivacious Lady" is none of your shoddy. It's thoroughbred comedy, witty to the core, sincere throughout and blessed with that intangible something commercially described as "quality."

Ginger is the night club beauty who marries the quiet botany instructor and goes off to meet his family, his father a stubborn parent and university president, his mother a wise woman with convenient fainting spells and his fiancee "a blue blood with a black tongue." Further, there are a genial playboy cousin, a suspicious hotel clerk (outdating "My Favorite Wife") and a hopeful assistant instructor.

Is Ingeniously Treated

Such a tale is completely reliant on the ingenuity of its handling. The two stars are at their finest in roles cut to fit. Director George Stevens was indeed fortunate in P. J. Wolfson's and Ernest Pagano's adaptation of the I. A. R. Wylie original. Charles Coburn and Beulah Bondi are unbeatable as the university head and his wife, while James Ellison's amusing playboy makes one wonder why one sees so little of him. That amiable Negro, Willie Best, is superb as the weeping porter. Frances Mercer, Franklin Pangborn and Grady Sutton have the other leads.

Only indication that time has marched on since May, 1938, is the comparative innocuousness of "Vivacious Lady." Later farces have been more spicy, risque or what-have-you. That this early comedy of the marriage cycle remains funny is proof of its inherent wit.

If you missed "Vivacious Lady" first time around, don't let it get away this trip. If you've seen it before, you'll enjoy a second meeting.

Wheat and Milk Are Declared to Be Greatest Need of France, Faced With Starvation

Last of a series based on a personal investigation of the food situation in unoccupied France by the United Press manager in Vichy.

By Ralph Heinzen
By the United Press

Toulouse, March 28.—At the end of a week's investigation of food conditions in the famine areas of unoccupied France my observations tend to support official assertions that some 10,000,000 of the 18,000,000 people in that region are in possible danger of starvation.

As usual, the poor, especially their aged and their babies, are the worst sufferers. And most people in France, now, are poor.

In these southern provinces, where I spent last week on a town-to-town and house-to-house investigation, the greatest immediate need is for wheat, for these people are bread eaters. The next greatest need is for milk, limited supplies of which already are being distributed by the American Red Cross.

Blockade Blamed

There are good reasons, I found, for the bread famine and they include:

1. The British blockade. Even in a normal year France imported 1 1/3 million tons of cereals and flour, 600,000 tons of rice, 300,000 tons of sugar, 1 1/3 million tons of vegetable oils and other products. Normal wheat production was about 70,000,000 quintals—7,000,000 tons. Annual consumption was 84,000,000 quintals. The 194 wheat harvest, due to the war, amounted to only 42,000,000 quintals—half of requirements. Of that production 84 per cent was in the zone now occupied by Germany and only 16 per cent in unoccupied France, with nearly half the Nation's normal population.

2. Lack of production and transportation. Production was disrupted because of the war and transportation virtually ceased to exist. In unoccupied France today, 36 of 38 departments (administrative areas) are not nearly self-sufficient in wheat, meat, sugar and fats. Even in normal times it was necessary to bring into these 36 departments from the areas now occupied by Germany very large supplies of food including potatoes from Brittany, cheese and butter from Normandy, sugar from Picardy and Flanders, and meat from the Loire Valley.

On Strict Rationing

It is only by strict rationing, and now by pooling and redistributing on a per capita basis, that inadequate supplies have been stretched as far as they have.

It seems a definite fact that, at the present rate of reduced consumption, all wheat and flour will have been exhausted by about May 15.

Food experts assured me that 500,000 tons of wheat—which presumably must come from the Americas—would carry unoccupied France through to the harvest on the basis of the present reduced rations. Deliveries, however, must be started during next month. The harvest does not come until late July or early August and there is a shortage of hands because some 2,000,000 men still are held in German prison camps. And when the harvest does come, even if it is up to normal, the grain will be barely enough to last for six months.

If the American Red Cross is able to continue its present fortnightly shipments, thousands of children will be saved.

Occasional food ships from the Americas will not be enough. There must be a regular and assured supply line. Officials estimate, for example, that 100 shiploads of food will be needed between now and the end of July.

And the Fench emphasize that they are willing to pay spot cash for this food and its transport. They have ample gold in accounts blocked abroad.

"Fate in His Hands"

Indicative of the government's attitude a high official said:

"We are waiting with anxiety for President Roosevelt to return to Washington. The fate of our people lies in his hands. If he will let us buy American wheat, and arrange for it to pass through the British blockade, we will be saved. We will guarantee that not one crumb of the food we buy from the United States will fall into German hands or pass into German-controlled territory. We already have proved, in the use of the small shipments that have arrived from the United States, that we can keep everything in free France."

One has to see the misery in this region to appreciate why Frenchmen sob when they talk of it.

I went to the biggest foundling home in Toulouse last week and saw scores of under-nourished children. Most of them were listed as "abandoned"—cast adrift by parents who had nothing for them to eat. The number of these children admitted increased by 50 per cent last month. In one over-crowded ward I saw 112 new-born infants, whose parents had simply left them at the institution's doors. They were scrawny babies, the offspring of harassed and underfed mothers. In homes for the aged the picture was much the same—men and women at the end of life's road, hungry.

Mother Cabrini's Canonization Nears

Vatican City, March 28 (AP).—Canonization of Mother Francesca Saveria Cabrini drew a step nearer today when the Vatican City News Service reported that a preparatory congregation of rites had, on March 18, examined the record of her miracles and found it satisfactory.

A new examination now will be carried out in conformity with canonical requirements after which the congregation of rites may be called to rule on the authenticity of the miracles.

Mother Cabrini, who was buried in New York, was beatified November 13, 1938—the first American citizen ever thus honored.

Lady Halifax Knits Oversize Socks

New York, March 28 (AP).—Lady Halifax, wife of the British Ambassador, has had some complaints about the socks she's been knitting for her three tall sons, who are all in England's army.

Her boys—and her son-in-law, too—protested the socks were too long, she said today, "but I pointed out they'd soon be shrunk in the wash."

Virginians Or What?

The State Senators from Virginia's Fourth and Eleventh Districts have expressed strong opposition to giving the populous area next to Washington a second Senator at the expense of their own southern bailiwicks. A Legislative Redistricting Committee has been appointed under a constitutional mandate providing that representation in the Assembly must be redistributed on the basis of population every ten years. The commission proposes, among other things, to divide up the Eleventh District between the Fourth and Ninth and give the senatorship thus eliminated to the Twenty-ninth, which includes Arlington, Fairfax and Prince William Counties and Alexandria City.

Senator Moses, of the Eleventh, was doing no more than his duty to his own constituents when he asked the commission last week to consider the theory that the Alexandria-Arlington area may be experiencing a mushroom growth that will disappear later. Let us see, though, how his position squares with the facts. His district in 1930 had 45,313 inhabitants. The Twenty-ninth had 90,548. Even on this basis, the representation by one Senator each was uneven. But in 1940 the Eleventh had grown only to 45,784, whereas the census of that year, taken before the great influx of defense workers, showed the Twenty-ninth to have a population of 149,230. This rate of growth cannot continue indefinitely, though any sudden decrease is hardly likely. For Uncle Sam is in business here, and any curtailment seems unlikely, whatever the future complexion of the Administration.

It would be unfortunate if increased representation for the Alexandria-Arlington area were blocked by one of those unwritten, unspoken rules which sometimes govern behavior in the South. Living in Virginia does not make one a Virginian, and there is a tendency to observe this distinction in politics. Virginians naturally would not wish their councils to be invaded by new residents bringing exotic ideas from New England and the prairies! But is northern Virginia to become a legislative desert inhabited by persons only nominally represented in the Assembly and having, therefore, no interest in the affairs of their adopted State? The better plan would be to make Virginians of the "furriners" by giving them at least one Senator per 75,000 persons.

They Want Parity

Farm spokesmen are undeterred by President Roosevelt's coldness toward plans for raising the farm prices of basic commodities still higher by means of Government loans. The Senate Committee on Agriculture has unanimously approved a bill introduced by Senator Bankhead to provide loans calculated to produce parity incomes for growers of wheat, cotton, rice and tobacco. The loans would not be equal to parity prices, but to parity prices less the amount received by borrowing farmers under the soil conservation program. However, Senator Bankhead has explained that, in the case of cotton, his bill would make it possible to raise the loan rate to a maximum of 14½ cents per pound. The difference required to give the farmer a parity return of 15.87 cents on his cotton would be made up by the conservation payments. In the case of corn—the fifth commodity covered in the bill—the aim is to attain 85 per cent of parity.

The Bankhead bill is more than a price-boosting measure, however; it is also designed to tighten up production control, making control a condition of obtaining parity or near-parity loans. Penalties for marketing farm products in excess of assigned quotas when such quota systems are in effect are also stepped up to a point which would virtually compel compliance with the marketing program. The limited initial cost of boosting prices by means of loans makes loan proposals especially appealing to legislators who might hesitate to vote largely increased direct subsidies to farmers under existing conditions. But the economic effect of price-raising loans that would raise prices of cotton textiles and of basic foodstuffs would be much more serious than an increase in direct benefits—unwarranted though this latter proceeding would be. The artificially high prices achieved through loans would have to be passed on to consumers, at a time when it is most important to maintain stable prices for basic commodities. Such a program flies directly in face of Administration efforts to keep living costs on an even keel and thus prevent widespread demands for wage increases that might be the first step toward inflation.

Even from the standpoint of the farmers, too sharp an increase in prices might spell loss, if it necessitated sharp reductions in output to maintain the artificial price level. After all, it is income, not unit prices, that is really important to the farmer. The ultimate cost to the Government of loan programs that have caused vast stores of cotton and record surpluses of wheat and corn to pile up in storage vaults cannot, of course, be determined at this juncture. But the higher the loan rate goes, the harder it is going to be to keep farm surpluses from constantly accumulating, and the greater will be the unrealized losses represented by Government-owned hoarded stores.

Food Swap

It looks as if Vichy will have to wait a very long time before another food shipment is sent to unoccupied France. One shipment was permitted in the hope that the Petain government would cease to collaborate with Nazi Germany outside the terms of the armistice arrangement. But the shipment has hardly had time to get halfway across before an item from Vichy informs the world that the Petain government, far from cooling off in its relations with Berlin, is actually reinforcing its collaboration. The item reports a food swap from which the Nazis would profit enormously. In return for wheat, potatoes, and sugar, Berlin will obtain cattle, vegetables, edible oil, salt, cheese, and wine.

The exchange has a good deal of interest to the student of the New Order in Europe. In "Mein Kampf" France is put among the lesser breeds of nations which have become "bastard." In consequence, she must accept a lower living standard, and live on a coarse diet. The essentials of such a diet form the Nazi contribution to unoccupied France: grain, potatoes and sugar. On this diet the lesser breeds are expected to produce better foodstuffs for the herrenvolk of Germany, and these furnish the French contribution to the exchange just reported: meat, fats, vegetables, cheese, wines. Thus in nutriment the Nazis have got much the better of the bargain, for the things they have received are full of vitamins, proteins, and mineral salts. Moreover, the oils happen to be of direct use to the war machine of Germany for propellants and explosives.

Whether the deal is current or dates back to the recent past will not mitigate the painful impression which this news must have left in fighting Britain and official America. It shows Vichy to be cooperating beyond the armistice arrangements in French enslavement and German war-making. Clearly the British government cannot keep up the morale of its people if it relaxes the blockade in favor of countries which are aiding and abetting their enemies in this manner. Nor would most Americans want them to. Indeed, if this is the concession that Admiral Darlan referred to on March 10, one must stigmatize the Vichy government as disingenuous. Admiral Darlan, it will be recalled, spoke of German consignments of wheat to unoccupied France as an example to the British and the Americans. It proved, he said, that the Germans "have been more generous and humanitarian than the British." Language is strained if these are the right words to apply to this arrangement. That either the deal or the intention to make it was not known to the British and American authorities at the time of the recent shipment is no tribute to the watchfulness or judgment of the American and Canadian envoys in Vichy.

Coventrated

None of us is likely to forget that what happened at Plymouth happened at Coventry not very long ago. Coventry was subjected to a bombardment which for concentrated ferocity and horror was comparable only to the bombardment of Warsaw and Rotterdam. More than one out of every twenty of the townspeople were killed, maimed or injured. It is just four months since the survivors of that bombardment gathered their dead and buried them in the common grave. Now we hear that in these four months the survivors have rebuilt their city, if not stone for stone and joist for joist, at least far enough for all ordinary purposes of life and of the war. An Associated Press correspondent who visited the place the other day found the old shops open and new ones established. Among articles for sale he found spring flowers, the latest styles in Easter clothing, house furnishings and toys. He found the townsfolk singing and whistling at their work, saw children playing in the streets. The factories were going briskly, and one of those which had been hardest hit in the bombardment had increased its output 10 per cent.

All this has been accomplished in so short a time by the eager effort of the whole population, and, indeed, could not have been accomplished otherwise. It was accomplished by men who had lost homes, savings and even families, men brought into a solidarity of purpose by a communal tragedy, and who found in labor the solvent for their grief. This spirit was evidently general, for the mayor is reported to have said that even Peeping Tom, were he in Coventry today, would cooperate with as much will as the rest. But the story of the resurrection of Coventry from its own ruins is merely a more dramatic version of what has been going on in Bristol, Birmingham and all the other blasted towns of England. Beyond doubt the story will be repeated at Plymouth. The victory of the townsfolk of Coventry is the sort of victory that can be won only by heart and the will—not the will of one but the common will. It serves to remind us that there are still occasions and circumstances where liberty is more efficient than the most efficient of tyrannies. "Democracy," says the Oxford scholar, A. D. Lindsay, "takes time to realize the cards in its hands." Realization is now coming triumphantly. From now on there is a constructive as well as destructive meaning for the war-word Coventrated.

One Cause Of Strikes

Settlement of the steel strike at Bethlehem, Pa., in four days reflects patriotism on the part of the union and the management as well as good work by the Labor Department's Conciliation Service. Yet the Government could not have permitted a walkout which has affected immense orders for defense equipment to continue for an extended period. And an all-night session held by the disputants and Federal conciliators suggests that the urgency of a quick settlement was fully realized in the setting of a possible Federal intervention.

Probably the most significant aspect of the agreement is the company's promise to meet and bargain collectively with its employes. Apparently the Employes Representation Plan, which the NLRB found to be a company union, completed its election while the strike was in progress. It was agreed, however, that there will be no more elections until the courts have passed upon the NLRB order dissolving the E. R. P. In the meantime the company will bargain with both organizations without discrimination. Considering the fact that the management had refused, until recent weeks, to meet with union leaders and Federal conciliators, this is doubtless an important step toward genuine collective bargaining. Until that principle is firmly established, hope for industrial peace will have little foundation. The fact that it is not yet established in many Bethlehem Steel plants is a serious reflection upon that company. Stubborn denial of rights that are guaranteed to workers by law inevitably breeds unrest which in turn gives rise to strikes. The best way to minimize disputes of this character is to eliminate the cause.

It is true that the NLRB has been working on the Bethlehem case since the spring of 1937. But the very fact that delay has been added to delay in final disposition of the case has been very discouraging to employes seeking the right to choose collective bargaining agents without interference. In the present emergency a special effort ought to be made to settle cases of this sort with dispatch. The aim is to get the collective bargaining process into operation without further waste of time. That will probably necessitate extraordinary efforts, which the National Defense Mediation Board might well ask to be speeded up, on the part of the NLRB to designate appropriate collective bargaining units and hold elections.

At present it is far more important to prevent strikes than to settle them. Organized labor can reasonably be asked to refrain from striking if it sees that the Government is using its influence to hasten the establishment of collective bargaining in practice as well as theory. The prestige of the Government has been properly mobilized against the Allis-Chalmers strike called three months ago on the strength of fraudulent ballots. No less vigor should be exercised in bringing recalcitrant employers into line with the Labor Relations Act and the spirit of the defense program.

MILL

Who is smiling there when the morning's hazy,
And Silence wears a mouse gray coat
And the woodland muffles up its throat
In mist? And again, during the lazy
Forenoon, when no bird haunts the air,
And not even the mill's green water
Remembers the little daughter
And her paper boats—who is smiling there?

Someone does, I know, though there's no call
Ever rises, and only the dust grows
Day by day along the empty rows
Of the Miller's bins, and over all
The flour stains the spiders trudge and weave,
And down along the shadowed floors
The tiny ones go back and forth, explore
Endlessly the finite trails they leave.

For, often, when the sun's poking through
The crumbling roof, and the afternoon
Is quiet as a small mosquito's tune,
And nothing in the whole world could be new,
Often, then, I've gone down there and lain
Waiting and watching—just my heart and I—
And felt a sigh, the very faintest sigh,

Imperialists?

It is a very curious thing that our isolationists are our worst imperialists. Have you noticed that the interventionists, much maligned as meddlers in a war of rival imperialisms, do not advocate the acquisition of any territory, whereas the isolationists often suggest taking over territory in this hemisphere.

Col. Lindbergh says, apparently in all seriousness, that we should take over Canada. He never thinks to find out how Canada feels about it. Henry Ford says we should aid both sides in this war until they both collapse, at which time we can pick up the pieces. John T. Flynn, the New York chairman of America First, says we should take this golden opportunity to pick up the European nations' colonies on this side of the ocean (without asking the colonies if they like the idea)—the Japanese way to perfection.

These remarks certainly have all the earmarks of imperialism. Furthermore, as to meddling in foreign nations' affairs, just picture to yourself how the foreign nations would feel if we started to walk off with territory which had been in their possession for centuries. Exactly as if Japan took this golden opportunity to annex the Philippines. Just one more proof that the isolationists' arguments don't make sense. BENJAMIN FT.AZIER.

New York, March 26.

Prince Georges County

In spite of the golden opportunity presented to Prince Georges County, the citizens continue to stand in their own light. They've fought development of nearby Prince Georges County through their fear of a rise in taxation for sanitary purpose while Montgomery and Arlington Counties have received the benefit of their ignorance. There might have been some excuse to thus shoo progress away 10 to 15 years ago when the nearby area was being profitably farmed and but little demand for suburban extension. However, now that the Government needs our wide open spaces, it's foolish to fight against their own interest.

If these pending Government projects should go to Virginia instead, then who will be to blame for it? Prince Georges now has the chance to get the main wing of Washington east of the river. Let's hope she doesn't muff that chance.

"Dead-Man Controls" For Trolleys

Your editorial "Death Rides the Tracks" prompts me to write this letter.

The streetcar crash here the other night has caused the death of one man and has injured several others. It has destroyed a lot of property. It has caused a lot of anxiety, worry and loss of sleep to the executives of the Capital Transit. Money will have to be paid for injuries, for property loss, for death. Time will be consumed at autopsies, investigations, hearings.

Let us suggest that the Capital Transit lock the doors of the stable even though the horse has been stolen. The installation of certain types of "Dead-Man Controls" on all of the two-man cars certainly will cost no more than this one accident.

The Public Utilities Commission and the Capital Transit both claim that the mechanical equipment of the cars involved in this most recent accident (and of all cars of the system in service) was in perfect condition. If the operator were in complete control of his faculties, he would have approached this particular intersection with caution for three reasons: he had to discharge and take on passengers; the light at the intersection was red, and the intersection has a cross track, and it is generally customary to slow down while crossing these tracks, there being a curve in the tracks.

Four incidents of former Transit accidents or "close calls" come to mind at this time. Two of these are not recorded; the other two involved property damage and injury to persons. In one, a streetcar went out of control in front of the White House, drifted by the loading platform in front of the Treasury, rode dizzily around the switch at Fifteenth Street and through the switch at G Street, crashing into the rear of another streetcar at the loading platform below F Street, a distance of four blocks. In another, a sandcar went out of control on B Street by the Capitol and came rapidly down into the path of an eastbound car. In the third, a car going west on P Street Northwest applied the brakes and used sand to slow down at the intersection turn at Thirty-sixth Street. I noticed the sand valve stuck and watched the air gage drop to 15 pounds. The car stopped at O Street; it still had good preasure then. When the car got to N Street, I shouted to the motorman to stop the car right away. He threw the valve, and the car continued, though it slowed down a little. The motorman applied the hand brake and was able to bring the car to a stand in the middle of the curve at Prospect Avenue. There was a car over the pit eastbound. If you have ever seen that turn, you will see what type of accident was avoided. In the fourth one, one motorman was so badly frightened on Wisconsin Avenue by an auto swerving out in front of him, that he nearly jumped from his seat. His hands and feet flew from the controls (at that time the hand control was in use on the 1000 cars), and the car stopped so fast that the passengers left their seats. The swerving auto barely missed the car. I asked the motorman if he had purposely stopped the car, the way he did. He said that he did not realize that the car had stopped till after it was all over and that if he had had to stop the car with the regular brake there would have been a very bad collision as both the streetcar and the auto were going over 40 miles an hour.

Equipment of this type should be installed on each and every car, so that the operator must exert energy to hold off the brake and keep the car in motion. An operator could have a momentary fainting spell that would not show in an examination, but would create a hazard. With "Dead-Man Controls" on the car, a momentary fainting spell would relax his muscles and he would not be able to keep the controller reostat on or be able to hold the brake lever off, and the car would stop either fast, as on the cars of the 1000 class or older, of the one-man type, or gradually fast as on the new streamliners.

In the interest of safety, I hope the Transit Co. will learn a lesson and the Public Utilities Commission will demand better safety devices on cars.

No Entanglements

We can be and remain, at the end of the European holocaust, the most prosperous, powerful and helpful nation on earth.

Or, through entrance and partnership, we can ruin our resources, demoralize American life, kill our boys on foreign soil, fill our hospitals with agony—to what end?

We have been called "the most gullible sheep in the world," "Uncle Simple" and "Uncle Shylock" for our last bold speculation in European politics.

They skimmed and trimmed and cursed us well. Our crusade made only a foundation for either anarchy or a Hitler. Another crusade will result in worse—in prolonged demolition until utter paralysis ensues, a cataclysm which our entrance would encourage and create.

Help Britain in the manner we have used to defend her homelands in the British Isles, but no further and at no greater hazard! Beyond such action and assurance, we should work for peace. No convoys, no partnership, no entanglements to preserve her selfishly governed far-lands.

The price of a new escapade includes demoralization and financial ruin for Uncle Sam's children; the debt of 150-billions, broken homes and a 29-cent dollar descending on the third and fourth generations. Let's be Americans once more—not "gullibles" again!

More Action, Less Talk

Is the best we can give to small unfortunate nations, one after another, extravagant praise and moral encouragement? Isn't it about time we talked less loudly, and quietly and earnestly got down to serious business and as swiftly as possible make this country the actual and working arsenal of democracy so as to be ready to assume the responsibility of the generous words and promises which we have thrown so lavishly at one tragically helpless country after another? Our talking hasn't done much good so far, and promises and praise haven't saved those countries from tragedy. There is not much time left and we still have England, Greece, China and possibly Yugoslavia, valiantly holding their own against the foes of democracy—our democracy. But they, too, can't stand up forever on the strength of words of endearment and encouragement—they need help, vital help, sufficient help, and they need it now. Before it is too late, let us manifest the greatness of our Nation, unselfishly, courageously and generously, that not only may those lost democracies again live, not only England, Greece, and China live on, but that our own great Nation may also preserve its glorious liberty and freedom.

MRS. GLADYS HUSS HOLTON,

New York, March 27.

Inconsistency?

If the so-called isolationists are trying to "keep us from forgetting fear" by telling us to beware of granting dictatorial powers to President Roosevelt, of the likelihood of another A. E. F., of the heavy taxation that will result from our participation in the war, etc., as stated by B. W. Frazier in a recent letter, then what in the name of common sense are the anti-isolationists trying to do by telling us that if England falls we will be in a "last-ditch war," that our Christian civilization is sure to be destroyed, and that Hitler is planning to conquer and enslave the world?

I agree with Harry Daniels that if inconsistency were a virtue, this world would be a paradise.

The Post Impressionist

The Social Straggler

I don't know whether you've noticed it or not, but when a party breaks up there is always one person who stays behind. Of course, old-fashioned people might think that when a party is over everyone should go home, but often the only opportunity you have of meeting your hostess is afterward. And even if you have met her, you may want to talk about some private matter that you wouldn't want overheard by the rest. At any rate, there can be a hundred and one reasons why you might want to stay behind after a party. Unfortunately, there are usually an equal number of reasons conspiring to make it impossible.

I have only known one man who never seemed to find it impossible—or, at least, only once. It's that once that I want to tell you about. His name was Archie. There was never a party he went to that he wasn't the last to leave. And he always did it so naturally, so nonchalantly, so unobtrusively. Many a man successful in other phases of life will fall down here. I know because I've gone into the matter pretty thoroughly, and the way Archie would handle the situation was simply amazing. His technique was superb. With technique, plus judicious audacity, nothing can stop you.

Archie would come up to his hostess at the end of a party, and you'd really think he was leaving; then suddenly he would clap his hand to his pocket and say, "Oh, by the way, did you give me back those snapshots?" And she would say, "What snapshots?" "Why, those snapshots of Jerry and me at Lake Placid. Maybe they're still in the living room. Mind if I have a look?" And, of course, by the time he'd looked we had all gone. And he stayed behind. I tell you, he became the recognized authority on the matter.

Well, it so happened that, with the season coming on and lots of hostesses giving parties, I thought that if I wanted to get well launched in the social whirl I had better look Archie up and ask him to give me a few hints on technique.

I found him in the midst of trying out some new devices for staying behind when I called at his apartment.

"Why, of course, I'll be delighted," he said. "As you see, I was just working out some new ideas when you came in. Doesn't do to get rusty, you know." He was sparring with a couple of dummies dressed as hostesses even as he spoke.

"Here's a honey I've just thought up." He made a pass at one of the dummies. "Look, you say good-night, and then suddenly you lean forward and whisper in her ear (here he pulled the dummy toward him), 'Have you heard about Jarvis? Pretty serious.' Then she'll say, 'Why, what is it?' Then you say, 'I'd better stick around a second and tell you.'"

I said that I thought that was wonderful and asked him if I could make some notes.

"Sure," he said. "Another sweetheart I've been rehearsing is the telephone. You see, you say good-night"—here he grasped the hand of the other dummy—"then suddenly, in low, incisive tones, like this, you ask, 'Oh, I say, could I use your phone? My mother, you know.' Then, of course, you hang on as long as necessary. Rather good, don't you think?

"The peachiest one, though," he went on, "and the one I keep for really first-class hostesses, is, 'Have you an aspirin?' No woman can ever resist the maternal instinct of giving you an aspirin, and, of course, she has to wait until the others have gone in order to find it. Then take a tip from me and try aspirin."

"It's awfully kind of you to tell me all these things." I thanked him and went home to start rehearsals at once.

I can't really say that I had much success. I had forgotten, of course, that Archie would be at every party I went to. Aside from that, all his suggestions went wrong when I tried them out. The first party I went to I used Approach No. 1. My hostess said, "Good gracious! The man's mad! I never even heard of Jarvis.' And yet, ten seconds later, as I was putting on my coat, I heard Archie say, "Jarvis's got the most wonderful filly running in the Belmont Stakes tomorrow. I'll jot it down if you've got some paper and pencil." "Just wait a while till the others have gone and I'll get them for you," she said.

Likewise, when I tried the telephone gag, all I got was, "Sorry, it's out of order." Yet a second later I heard Archie say, "When can I phone you? I've something rather spicy to tell you." "Oh, please wait till the others have left. You can tell me then," she said.

With the aspirin I had no better luck. "Sorry, I haven't one in the house," she told me. Then I saw Archie step up. "I'll bet you haven't got an aspirin," he said, "but what else have you got?" "Wait till I can go and look," she said. I could have shot him.

Continued failure was beginning to prey on my mind. I determined to thwart Archie. I thought and thought, and then I got an idea. A big idea! I bided my time, until an invitation came from the prettiest hostess of the season.

Archie accepted, too, of course, and when I saw him I knew it would be a fight to the finish. I watched the guests leaving. One by one they went; only Archie and I remained. Then Archie went up and started talking to her. Now was my chance.

"Why, hello, Archie," I said. "I didn't know you knew my wife. Sorry you're leaving. Hope you enjoyed the party."

He didn't seem to be able to reply. I even had to help him on with his coat. It wasn't until I opened the door that he said, "I—I must apologize, old man. I—I didn't know that was your wife."

"Neither did I," I said, and closed the door.

After that success never left me.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Yugoslavs And American Policy

THE UPRISING of the Yugoslavs is the first great European event since the United States formally abandoned its isolation and adopted the lend-lease policy. We may consider it under this aspect not in order to glorify ourselves — for the glory and the dangers are for King Peter and his people — but in order to study for our own guidance the practical wisdom of our policy.

LIPPMANN

We have had a part in this great event. Had we failed to dedicate this country to the task of providing arms to the Allies, it is unlikely that Britain could have afforded or would have dared to land in Greece and with the Greeks to establish a line from which the Yugoslavs can, if they are attacked, be supported. Without the reserves of weapons that we alone can provide, the British would almost certainly have had to husband their resources for their own ultimate defense. Had the British been unable to land in Greece, and to make available to the Greeks and the Yugoslavs the supplies they must have in order to resist, the prospect would have been too hopeless for any organized national resistance.

WE DO NOT need to make any predictions about the military developments in the Balkans in order to see that the uprising in Yugoslavia is strong evidence in favor of the underlying conception of the lend-lease policy. The opponents of the policy have not often understood it. Thus they have argued that Hitler is master of the European continent, that he cannot be defeated except after an "invasion" of the continent by an expeditionary force of several million American soldiers. So they have contended that there is no way to defeat Hitler or that he can be defeated only by a staggering sacrifice of American lives.

The supporters of the lend-lease interventionist policy have replied that this whole contention is based on a false conception of the state of Europe and of the grand strategy of the struggle. They have maintained that throughout Europe, in all the occupied territory, in all the threatened countries, and to a very considerable extent within the Axis itself, there were millions of men, often whole nations of men and women, praying, plotting, organizing, working for the day when they can rise up and throw off an ever more intolerable tyranny. Behind the facade of Hitler's empire there is forming, they said, a European coalition of free men. Those who talk about an "invasion" of Europe are imagining an absurdity: they are imagining Great Britain's and America's armies trying to fight their way across Europe while the French, the Belgians, Dutch, the Norwegians, the Danes, the Poles, the Czechs, the Austrians, the Hungarians, the Yugoslavs, the Bulgars sat quietly in their homes as their "liberators" marched past. The truth is that the problem is not how to invade Europe but how to provide Europeans with the means and the opportunity to liberate themselves.

THE STAND OF the Greek people and the uprising of the Yugoslavs goes far to prove that this conception of the war in Europe is correct. Beyond the possibility of dispute we know now that the peoples of Europe do not regard totalitarianism as the wave of the future, that given even half a chance they will fight it to the death, that given half a chance they will rebel against it. Not one nation has joined the New Order voluntarily; the nations which have not resisted, Hungary, Rumania, Bulgaria, were all of them trapped geographically; they were so isolated that no help could reach them, or they were surrounded so that there was nowhere they could retreat.

But the Norwegians can be reached by sea: they resisted and their resistance grows. The Dutch and the Belgians fought, and when they were defeated at home they fell back upon their ally in Britain and upon their empires overseas. The Greeks, backed up against the sea, which Britain controls, resisted, and now the Yugoslavs who also have a backdoor to the sea and to the free nations overseas. The evidence is very strong, therefore, that in Europe the will to resist Hitler and to defeat him is immense and that the problem is to furnish the people of Europe with the means and with the opportunity of their own liberation. If the will to resist did not exist in the souls of Europeans, it would be vain to suppose that an American army could provide freedom for peoples who will not fight for it. If, on the other hand, the will to resist is there, as indeed it is and ever more fiercely, then we can rest assured that the best troops for fighting in Europe will be Europeans fighting for their own homes, their own altars, their own flags, their own hope of life itself.

THE TASK OF the British in the first instance is to see to it that the peoples of Europe are not cut off hopelessly and finally from their sources of supply overseas. That means that Britain itself must survive the assault victoriously, and must be able to control the seas. It does not mean that the British must overrun Europe. The troops that the British land in Europe cannot be, and are not intended to be, an army for the "invasion" of Europe. They are a rallying point at the other end of the lines of supply which it is Britain's great mission, assisted by the United States, to maintain. These British landing forces are not huge armies such as we saw in the other war: they are a moral and physical connection with the free nations overseas—a nucleus around which the peoples themselves can gather, can steel themselves, can catch their breath, and organize their resistance. For every British soldier landed in Europe, a thousand other soldiers come forward from among the invaded and threatened peoples themselves. And that is how the army for the liberation of Europe, and of the world, is going to be recruited.

The task we have set ourselves is to provide the weapons for the army of liberation—for this army which will before the tale is finished arise from every corner of Europe if only the weapons are made, and there are the ships to deliver them, and the free peoples hold the command of the seas.

The Once Over

Dear Mom:

Well, I got transferred out of the ski corpse as I was on my back so much I was no help to the outfit and I am glad to be back in camp as I gess I wud rather have soar feet than dislocated ankuls and snow all down my spinul collum most of the time. Mud is bad but snow and ice is worse witch is saying a lot becuz the mud I am speaking about is no ordinerry mud. Take all the mud you have ever seen and mix it with ice water, Hungarian goolash, wall plaster and thick soup and you get an idea of the mud I mean.

As soon as I got back from the ski corpse I got put in the kitchen police so I gess the general is planning to use me for general housework in this war. I was put pealing potatus and I never had no idea there was so many potatus in this country before. All my life I seen you pealing potatus, mom, but I can't even think of it now without noing how you must of suffered. Believe me from now on I am all for baked potatus witch nobody has to peal.

When I am not pearing potatus or washing dishes I am being learnt how to handle a gun and a lot of emphersis is put on how to shoot from all positions kneeling sitting lying down standing up and vica versus. This combines marksmunship with settin up exercises and haf the time I don't know if I am in the army for shooting or for fiizzical culshure.

In the old time war a soljer could fight standing up but I gess in modern warfair you got to shoot in all directions witch is why the best marksmun in my compahy is a fellow who was a contorshunnist with a circus.

I am still being innoculated and I wish I new what the army thinks I am in danger of catching. It must be a new disease as I have already been innoculated against all diseses I ever herd of except bunions witch I gess there is no innoculashun against. If a soljer catches anything in this army it won't be on account he ain't full of enuff serrums. I got a laff the other day when I herd two camp doctors was sick and they wuz the only men in the outfit that wasn't innoculated.

I got your clipping, mom, with all the pitchers of Porky Oliver in a draft camp but pleze do not worry why I don't get my pitchers in the papers two. Unless you are a famiss golfer or baseball player you don't get your pitcher in the paper until you amount to something in the army. I was amewsed at the pitchers of Porky in full uniform practicing his golf swing and at first I was pretty soar becus if he can bring his golf clubs to camp why can't I bring my jalloppy witch is my favorite sport. But later I think it over and I realize it is all for the newspapers and that by this time he is learning the emanuel of arms like the rest of us as there is no golf younit in the army and the new weppon witch everybody talks about is no nibblick.

The camp is almost finished now and I ain't always bumping into bunch of carpenters with planks like at first. We have got swell lockers just like in country clubs and baseball camps. We each get a key just like club members and I keep opening and shutting mine for the feeling of importance it gives me. My locker is big enuff for a man to hide in witch gives me a good idea if I get asked to peal any more potatus.

Do not worry about me as I don't feel much worse than I have right along and nuthing new has happened to me except a toothake, a new outbrake of chilblanes and my first wound. It come from a potater knife. Your loving son,

OSCAR.

Political Note

There is talk of drafting Mayor LaGuardia for a third term. It is estimated that while he has been in service a long time he is still good for another 5,000 fires.

It's Sedition

Judge Arthur Gomez, the Florida jurist who at first refused to grant Betty Compton a divorce from Jimmy Walker and then granted her one, must have been forced to reconsider. Any Florida judge who would dare to hesitate for a minute in giving a visitor a divorce would be bound to get himself into bad favor among his fellow jurists, the politicians and the State biggies. Divorces while you wait are an advertised feature of life in the Anything-Goes Belt. And, as Elmer Twitchell puts it, "No Florida court can slow up a divorce applicant and get away with it."

The Gallup Poll

Labor Unions Have Alienated Sympathy, Survey Finds; Ford Case Is Illustration

This is the fourth in a series of five reports by the Gallup Poll on public opinion toward labor unions. The final report in the series will be published Sunday.

By Dr. George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., March 28.—Though American labor unions have made substantial gains in their legal and economic status under the New Deal, they have definitely lost sympathy to some extent with the general public during the same period.

That fact is clear from studies which the American Institute of Public Opinion has conducted among the rank and file of United States voters for more than six years and in which the Institute has talked to scores of thousands of men and women on the problems of labor.

In that period the number of Americans favoring unions "in principle" has not increased. Indeed, Institute surveys indicate it has dropped slightly.

Five years ago, in the midst of Franklin D. Roosevelt's second Presidential campaign, 76 per cent of the voters were found favoring unions in principle in one of the Institute's fact-finding studies. The latest of these check-ups showed 74 per cent favoring unions in principle.

Moreover, while most Americans are willing to say a good word for the principle of labor unions, their sympathies have frequently been against the unions in important individual cases.

This is illustrated by the trend of sentiment on Henry Ford, who has long refused to recognize unions in his plants.

Just four years ago, while other automobile manufacturers were beginning negotiations with the C. I. O.'s United Auto Workers Union, Ford announced he would continue with a nonunion policy.

To find out what the general public thought of Ford's policy the Institute conducted a survey among a cross-section of American men and women in every State on the question:

"Henry Ford says he will refuse to recognize labor unions in his plants. Do you agree or disagree with this viewpoint"

Attitude on Ford, April, 1937
Agreeing	47%
Disagreeing	41
No opinion	13

Ford Gains Support

But the fact is, during the last four years the number of Americans siding with Henry Ford in the Institue's surveys has increased—not diminished.

A similar question put to voters in the last fortnight and reported today for the first time shows the following shift of public opinion:

Attitude on Ford, March, 1941
Agreeing	58%
Disagreeing	29
No opinion	13

To find out how many Americans agree with Westbrook Pegler's oft-repeated charges that many United States unions are overrun with self-seeking racketeers, the Institute asked in its current survey of opinion from coast to coast:

"Westbrook Pegler, the newspaper writer, claims that many labor union leaders are racketeers. Do you agree or disagree with him?"

Only a handful were unable to answer the question, and the great majority said they thought that "many" such leaders were racketeering at the expense of their members and the public in general. The replies:

Agree with Pegler	72%
Disagree	14
No opinion	14

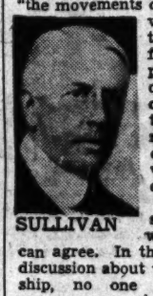
Of Censorship

By Mark Sullivan

Regarding The Suppression Of News

SECRETARY OF THE NAVY Frank Knox has asked newspapers and radio not to report "the movements of British vessels which may come to this country for repairs." He puts his request on the ground, clearly justified, that "such information would be of inestimable value to enemies of [Britain]."



SULLIVAN

Here is a simple test to which everyone can agree. In the wide range of discussion about war-time censorship, no one can reasonably oppose suppression of information which would enable the enemy to gain a point in the war. But to say this is not to say much. Always arises the matter of applying the abstract principle to a concrete case. As to any fact or incident, always the question arises, would publication of this enable Germany better to prosecute the war? About this, judgments will always differ, with the self-interest of the press tending one way, self-interest of the Army and Navy tending the other. And often the answer of the newsmen may be given thoughtlessly. It is in the nature of news to happen suddenly; and newsmen, thinking always of time, may not reflect on policy.

Recently, some newsmen received information that a rather important detail of our armament is, in practice, not turning out to be as successful as was hoped. In this case, the newsmen had time to reflect, and did reflect, on whether publication of their information would be of military value to Germany. Their judgment was that it would not. By the time, if it comes, when we are in actual war with Germany, the imperfection in this detail of our equipment will have been overcome, or other equipment substituted.

YET HERE appears a no-man's land, as to which military men, and men responsible for Government policy, sometimes have views differing from those of the press. Hitler must at all times, now, be considering whether to make war on the United States. The quality of our armament, whether for ourselves presently, or for transfer to Britain now, must be a definite factor in Hitler's calculations. It must affect not only military calculations, but his personal psychology—which is at once volatile, and a strong factor in his conduct. Knowledge of even a comparatively small defect in our armament, even though it is readily curable, might influence a man of Hitler's temperament.

What we are considering here is not the direct military value of information to the enemy, but the effect information may have on morale, on the mind of an enemy leader, or an enemy army, or an enemy civilian population. Military men, and statesmen, include in their arsenals for war, the exploitation of whatever will lower enemy morale—and of course the suppression of whatever might encourage enemy morale. To cause the enemy to feel discouraged is almost as much a part of the art of war as tanks and cruisers. Also of course, military leaders keep in mind the morale of their own armies, and of the civil population at home.

The press, and the public, can hardly consent, as much as military men and heads of state might properly wish, to suppression of information on the basis of any standard so intangible as effect on men's minds, on morale. To assent to this would reduce the press almost to the status it has in totalitarian countries, a mere agency of government.

MILITARY MEN, and heads of state, see the usefulness to them of censorship—the concrete, affirmative value it can have in the conduct of war. But often they fail to see that there is also concrete, affirmative value in lack of censorship, and in knowledge by the people that there is no censorship. Lack of censorship—that is, the free functioning of press and radio—has the value, great in any area of life, of a disinfectant, a fumigant, a purifier.

Where censorship exists, foul weeds grow, fungus springs up—wild rumors of all sorts germinate and spread. In a condition of censorship, imagine that Citizen A tells Citizen B that—to use a fantastic example—the American fleet has been destroyed in battle, or the Prime Minister of Great Britain has been assassinated. Citizen B believes the story; eagerly he waits for his newspaper, or the radio news, to give him the details. When press and radio make no mention of the story, Citizen B assumes his informant was mistaken. But suddenly a thought comes to him—"Ah, the censorship—the government won't allow it to be told." Thereupon Citizen B not only believes the story but expands it, adorns it, passing it on to Citizen C with the additional information that the assassination of the British Prime Minister was committed by Chancellor Hitler in person. Of this sort of thing there were fantastic examples during the Great War.

CORRECTIONS: This column a few days ago spoke of Mr. Sidney Hillman, codirector of the Office of Production Management, as vice president of C. I. O. and official of the American Labor Party; and criticized the simultaneous holding of these labor posts and a Government office. I am informed by Mr. Hillman's office that Mr. Hillman resigned his offices in C. I. O. and the American Labor Party last November, and is on leave of absence from his headship of the Textile Workers' Union of America. This puts Mr. Hillman on the same basis as business men who have resigned or suspended their private connections to take Government offices in defense work.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Stating A Position

I AM NOT anti-labor, but pro-labor, and I hold that American workers need deliverance and protection from the extortions, physical brutalities and other persecutions by which even some of our most respected union bosses have obtained their irresponsible and unrestrained power over unwilling victims. Neither am I anti-union, insisting that the workers need organization and mass bargaining power and that unions have a rightful cooperative role in the American community.

I do maintain, however, that it is dangerous and wrong to permit any private groups to operate as sub-governments, with no responsibility whatever to the rest of the community, and that inasmuch as we have now decided to use Government compulsion indirectly, but irresistibly, to force workers into unions, we must also provide that they shall be treated fairly by the unions.

PEGLER

A RECENT decision of the Supreme Court held, in substance, that a union possesses a special right to commit wrongs and inflict damage on business firms—which, incidentally, pay taxes, whereas unions pay none, and shall be immune to punishment and free of liability for damage. I hold this to be wrong on the face of it, and it seems to me to need no argument that private, irresponsible organizations should be restrained from rioting, sabotage and vandalism at all times, just as the rest of us are. I hold also that they should be prevented from closing down plants, whether or not the plants are engaged in war work, as a means of deciding an issue of jurisdiction between one union and another. I say they should be required to settle such disputes between themselves without economic damage to innocent third parties or to workers who are thrown out of time and put to great sacrifice of earnings by such stoppages.

But even if I were frankly anti-labor and anti-union, my sentiments would have no effect on the validity of the revelations which have been proved or of my arguments. When a prosecution presents a case of murder before a jury, it is no defense to say "He doesn't like the defendant." In this case it is up to the unions to refute the charges and answer the arguments. This has not been done, although many able commentators and reporters in our lay press, with access to as much white paper as I am permitted to use, are strongly inclined in favor of the unions as they exist now. The issues are entirely ignored, and recently two publications of the American Federation of Labor, by way of answer to specific, unqualified charges of dishonest, dictatorial conduct by powerful unioneers, tried to deceive the rank and file members by suppressing the testimony and resorting to personal scurrility.

Both publications serve the personal interests of union bosses whose great power and soft living are threatened by the disclosures, and I am now preparing documentary proof that one of them deliberately lied to the workers and placed in the mouth of a prominent Congressional leader statements which he did not utter. We of the lay press often have been accused of serving our masters, but I am going to prove that much of the so-called labor press is dishonest and disloyal to the workers whom it deludes and preys upon and lives by editorial motto "Whose Bread I Eat, His Songs I Sing."

I SEEM TO be in distinguished company in condemning the jurisdictional strike, for President Roosevelt himself belatedly deplored it recently. I find also that Mrs. Roosevelt now agrees with me that people should not be compelled to join unions—a declaration which I construe as indorsement of the open shop.

I feel rather self-important in stating my position thus, as though I were a public man announcing his platform, because it is my idea that the facts should speak for themselves regardless of the sentiments of those who state them. However, for such importance as they may possess, them is my sentiments.

Elements Of Victory

By Harold J. Laski

Of The People Confronting Hitler

London.

I SPENT FOUR DAYS of last week in the north of England—three of them in Manchester, where physical destruction and loss of life have both been on a pretty heavy scale. I talked to all sorts and conditions of men, from the editor of a great newspaper and an eminent figure in the cotton trade to a union organizer and a girl of perhaps 19 who is a conductor on one of the Corporation busses.

LASKI

Certain things were outstanding in their views because they were common to them all. None of them contemplated the possibility of defeat. All of them had the sense that a heavy price would be exacted for victory; but all agreed, especially in the light of the fate of France, that the price was too great. They all spoke in terms of affectionate admiration for Mr. Churchill and President Roosevelt, spoken of as almost intimate friends. There were plenty of doubts and hesitations. Will America go on cooperating after the war? What of economic security in the future? What about the future of the children whose education has been so deeply disturbed by bombing and evacuation? How far can we dare hope that defeat in this war will teach the Germans the futility of aggression? Will businessmen recognize that the days of laissez-faire are over? Will the sense of unity born from common danger survive the test of a return to conditions of peace?

I list without any sense of emphasis the questions that were raised. They are evidence, at least, that this grim experience has pricked men and women of all sorts and conditions into a grim insurgency of thought.

MY COTTON MAGNATE, for example, was mainly concerned with rebuilding Manchester and the avoidance of any semblance of profiteering in its reconstruction. His anxiety was that the government should take full powers to prevent any speculation in land values. His own vast warehouse was totally destroyed in the big blitz; and he had insisted to his codirectors that the site must be held at the disposal of the city council as part of whatever new design they might decide upon.

My trade union official was mostly concerned with the younger men in the factories. "They need to know more history," he said with emphasis. "We've got to make them see why men like Hitler can get power. They can't have responsibility without knowledge."

The woman bus conductor was proud of her job. "It makes you feel you're a real person," she said, "when you carry on during a blitz." She had been afraid at first; now she took it as part of the day's work. "He" (Hitler always is "he") "can't get me down."

But of one young man I met in Manchester I want to write at a little length; he is an example of the unobtrusive spirit this war has called forth. G—— is 25, a school teacher who had been rejected for military service on medical grounds. He came to see my father with two Italian refugee children for whom he wanted work. The girl was anxious to be a hospital dispenser; the boy had dreams of aeronautical engineering.

THE CHILDREN, who were enchanting, were well-dressed and spoke almost faultless English. They had come to this country in July, 1939. Who had guaranteed their support? A friend. Who would maintain them while they were being trained for their jobs? The same friend was willing to take the responsibility.

As the discussion of ways and means developed, it turned out, from a casual reference, that the teacher himself was the friend. For almost two years he had spent just over a quarter of his salary looking after them. He had done so because, realizing that he was not physically capable of fighting, he felt he ought to play his part in some other way. He had not known the children before their arrival in England; but he had met them in his school, and when his attempt to enlist failed in September, 1939, looking after them seemed an obvious way of bearing his part of the common burden.

I wish I could reproduce the quiet tones in which he explained the selflessness of his attitude. He was a specialist in languages; and five years ago a piece of research on medieval German seemed to him more important than anything else in life. Then he had gone abroad to France and Germany. The contrast between the treatment of Jews in the two countries made everything seem irrelevant save the rescue of the younger generation from the sadism of the Nazi philosophy.

AT FIRST he had been content to send an occasional donation to various relief funds. But his mind was always haunted, he said, by the faces of the Jews he had seen in Germany. He had never before known what it meant to see people from whom hope had been deliberately taken away.

He was a deeply religious man; and what he had witnessed seemed to him a challenge to his faith. He was called to some personal sacrifice to vindicate its title to respect. At first he had thought this might be achieved with money. Then, after the declaration of war, he had hoped that he might, as a soldier, make vicarious reparation for the Nazi wrongdoing. When that was denied him, he had assumed responsibility for the two children and looked after them as though they were his own.

All his evenings had been given to teaching them English; he realized that an accent might easily make them handicapped. He not only housed, fed and clothed them; he had paid for the girl to have private coaching in chemistry and the boy in mathematics. He had undertaken teaching work in evening classes when his school day was over so that the children might have the same standard of life as ordinary children in school; if, for instance, they were invited out to other children's houses, he wanted it to be possible for them to return the hospitality. His ambition—I think he had succeeded—was that the children should not feel they were refugees dependent on charity. They were, in the full sense, to feel that they were citizens building a new home.

HERE WAS, I felt, a good European and a good Christian. In the midst of this grim struggle one man had, by personal effort, built an oasis in which these two little victims had found shelter from the storm. The smiling happiness they showed was testimony to the effort he had made. He was not, I think, an exceptionally able man, but he had a sensitive imagination. He was civilized in that ultimate sense which refuses to accept anyone's right to inflict unnecessary pain.

I did not discover that in any formal sense he had strong political views. He hated both Hitler and Mussolini. He thought their defeat an essential condition of a decent life. Whether he had probed at all deeply into the whys and wherefores of their emergence I did not learn. He simply felt that he could not be a disinterested spectator of what he regarded as outrage upon the principles of his life. He was convinced that it was not enough to have that understanding; he must act upon it. Hence my story of an experience as moving as any I have encountered in this war.

I should like to feel that our purpose in this war is to leave G—— and the myriads like G—— the world over a chance to exercise unfettered that sensitive imagination he has displayed. His action was possible under the democratic way of life; it is not possible under any other. I think that what G—— has done is symbolic of that will to banish fear from the lives of ordinary people which is the root of all we fight for today. G—— is a soldier, if ever there was one, in the war of humanity.

Educator Assai's 'Insipid Stuff' Taught Students

Philadelphia, March 28 (AP).—Miss Gladys Ide, Philadelphia director of special education, who says school teachers "offer school children insipid stuff," wants the instructors to "learn the way of life of the students."

"Read the newspapers and find out what's going on in the world," she told a special education panel of the twenty-eighth annual schoolmen's week at the University of Pennsylvania last night.

"Some teachers are teaching what happened 1,500 years ago, when we have the here-and-now problem," she continued.

"We offer the children insipid stuff. The kids can't stand it and I don't blame them. The teachers must learn the way of life of the students. We must make them capable of getting by without being exploited in life."

Six Promoted Police Officers Given Assignments

Assignments of six policemen whose promotions were approved last week were announced yesterday, with Capts. John H. Fowler and Clement P. Cox named as commanders of the Thirteenth and Eighth Precincts, respectively. They will take over their new duties Tuesday.

The men were promoted to fill vacancies left by the retirements of Capt. James E. Bobo and the absence of Capt. Lloyd Kelly, who is on active duty with the Marines.

Sergts. Bert Sheldon and Thomas E. Edwards, both of whom are made lieutenants, will be assigned to the Tenth and Second Precincts, while Privates Earl Noble and Edward H. Sennott, promoted to sergeants, will be attached to the Tenth Precinct and Accident Prevention Unit.

Midnight Stars . . .

1. JANE McKENNA—You've laughed at her and with her many times—will be with Joe, as usual, to fill the bill of a knockabout team at the Greek Relief Benefit Midnight Show

2. JEAN HUBERT, feminine half of the Frank and Jean Hubert comedy team, is also among the entertainers for the midnight show tonight at the Capitol Theater for the benefit of Greek Relief. The show features a coalition of stars from three Washington stages—National, Capitol and Earle. Dancer Paul Draper will be there. So will all of the Rhythm Rockets and the Roxyettes

Defense Boom Surges Over City's Bounds

Washington, overpacked with new battalions of Government workers brought here for defense jobs, is hurriedly finding more room for them to work, live, and move around in.

New homes, new office buildings in Washington and vicinity are going up like weeds.

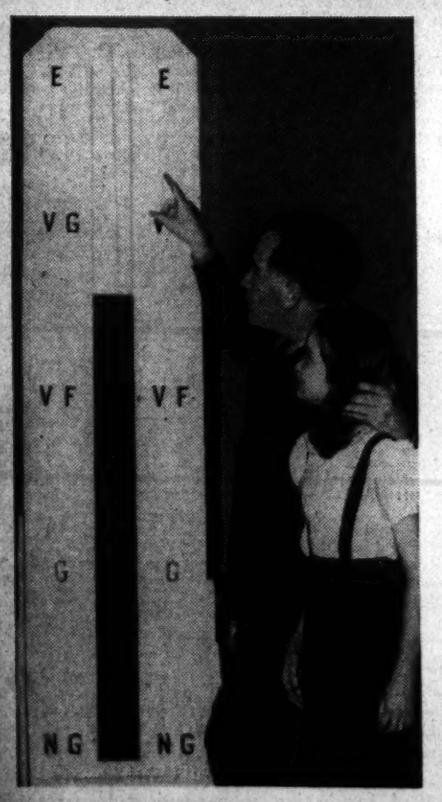
Three hundred new homes are being built by the Government on King Street extended in Alexandria to take care of workers in the Navy's torpedo station. First of the housing units (shown at left under construction) is expected to be ready June 1, the rest by the end of that month.

3. THE "SINGING POWERS MODELS"—Katherine Miller, Rosalind Madison, Carolyn Cromwell—will be a very definite part of the entertainment at the midnight show



A New Note in group singing was struck by Dr. Hans Kindler, director of the National Symphony Orchestra, when he conceived this "singing thermometer." Here, Maestro Kindler explains to Patricia Chambers, 10, of 2030 Allen Place Northwest, that the device will be used in the group singing numbers on the final Students' Concert of the season in Constitution Hall at 11 a. m. today. When the thermometer shows a poor rating, more of the audience are expected to join in the singing

Army 'Fits Shoes' For Boot Shop's Entire Sales Staff

From selecting shoes to please feminine fancies to Selective Service to please Uncle Sam is not the smallest of feats.

But the switch has been made or is in the making for the entire staff of six clerks at the Chandler Boot Shop, 1208 F Street Northwest, and Manager Herman Seigel is far from being pleased.

That is, Seigel isn't pleased about having his whole personnel "gone with the draft," but he is glad to know his salesmen are going to serve their country and promises them jobs when they return.

Abe Mendelson, 25, of the Alton Hotel, 1007 E Street Northwest, called three weeks ago and now in service at Fort Bliss, Tex.

Lowell Keese, 27, also of the Alton Hotel and also at Fort Bliss for the past four weeks.

Bernard Mellman, 25, of 1803 Biltmore Street Northwest, who goes to St. Louis, Mo., April 14 to be inducted from that area.

Charles Fuller, 32, assistant manager of Chandler's, who has sent in his questionnaire and expects to be called shortly.

Jerome Kaufman, 31, of Arlington, Va., a first lieutenant in the Army Reserves, has been notified to be ready within six weeks.

Ralph Kendall, 23, of 717 Twenty-second Street Northwest, was hired to replace one of the men called. His Selective Service number will be "popping up" any day now, he said.

SELECTED FOR SERVICE—Charles B. Fuller and Bernard Wellman, of Chandler Boot Shop on F Street, are soon to be fitted for shoes themselves. They'll be hob-nailed Army shoes

Seigel is 33 and also has sent in his questionnaire. But he has a wife and child, so probably will be deferred.

"I guess the only thing I can do," he lamented yesterday, "is to hire myself some salesmen with white beards."

Here's a personal note to Keese down at Fort Bliss: A lady came into the store yesterday and asked for him. When told he was "in the Army now," she retorted:

Zoo's Who . . . No. 34

If I were a barn owl, y'know what I'd do?
I'd find me a barn and then sound off my "Hoo."
My nest I would line with some hair and a few sticks,
For comfort as well as, of course, the acoustics.

Their problems on housing are well 'tended to;
A cage is quite crampy, no one will dispute,
But as for this pair, well, they don't give a hoot.

For the Exotic Type

If you are the exotic type, you'll want spring accessories to complement your unusual charm. But even if you represent the genuine "American beauty" type of woman, play up to your chic. One of the newest accessory fashions is colored Tiger Snakeskin. Above, it is made into a very clever handbag by David Lewis. Tying into the scheme is the matching snakeskin belt. Shoes are also available in the same matching reptile skin. They come in such colors as Jungle Red, Hot Orange, Lemon Yellow, Neon Blue, Biscuit Beige and Sabu Brown. Wear them with a carefree air and wrap a whiff of a turban in matching color around your head

Graciousness Rather Than Things Important in Entertaining

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

THE LITTLE yellow tea set is my friend's most treasured possession. Not because it's really so valuable, and now there are only two cups and saucers left, but she cherishes it because in the early years of her marriage it was her one sociable possession. With it she could always make a party, no matter who dropped in, no matter how plain were her quarters at that particular time. For in those years her husband's business entailed many moves and for a long while the yellow tea set was the only household equipment she owned. So she packed it tenderly in her trunk for each move.

Later during more prosperous settled years, when she could have a silver tea service and the most exquisite of thin china cups, she would always smile quizzically when some caller would sigh about not being able to entertain for the lack of proper equipment.

"All you need is a pottery tea set," my friend would say, and nod toward her old yellow majolica pieces in the cabinet. "The happiest, gayest years of my life revolved around that teapot yonder. Often we'd be living in furnished rooms, or at best in a meager little furnished flat, but that tea set always added a cheery note to the scene. And with it I felt able to be a gracious hostess to anyone. Why, we often used to have my husband's 'boss' and his wife for tea on Sunday afternoon—I'd have loads of tasty sandwiches and the gooey kind of cake that men like and a fine, strong blend of tea. Some way it never seemed to matter that the rooms were so poor and plain. And it was so much nicer to entertain nicely with tea than to have had a dinner that would have been a flop. It's all a matter of realizing one's limitations and making the most of them.

"I'm an old lady and I've had a happy life," she continued. "So maybe I'm entitled to give advice. If I am, here it is—don't ever let the lack of 'things' hold you back. They're really incidental to your spirit—it takes so little, materially, to entertain with . . . my yellow tea set is a symbol of just how little. So don't sit back and mope for what you don't have. And don't try to plan beyond your equipment—have simple parties for two or three friends at a time, rather than ambitious affairs that will floor you. But don't sit at home alone just because you haven't attained the sterling and real lace era in your life. Go and get a yellow tea set!"

Over the Coffee Cup

Back in 1874, Amy Lowell wrote this:

"After the coffee, things ain't so bad."

That happens to be just as true today as it was back in 1874. A good rich cup of Wilkins Coffee won't cure your troubles, but it will put you in the frame of mind where you can iron them out pretty well.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Studious, Easy-Going Boy of 11 Resents Having To Take His Younger Brother, 9, Wherever He Goes; Calls Him a Troublemaker; Father Asks Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am the father of two boys, 9 and 11 years old, and I would like your advice on this subject: The older boy does not want to take his brother with him when he goes places,—as he complains that he doesn't have a good time, due to his brother's being a troublemaker. He says the party usually ends up in a fight.

Should I insist that the older brother take the younger brother with him? I am very anxious for them to grow up companionably, enjoying each other's society. The older boy is quiet, studious and reserved in manner, whereas the younger boy is full of life, very ambitious, likes to work with tools and doesn't like books. Naturally, they have nothing in common. How should I manage them.

ANXIOUS FATHER.

DEAR A. F.: Within reason, each child in a household of several children should be encouraged and assisted in "finding himself;"—in developing a life of his own: a design-for-living which affords him opportunities for most constructive employment of his special abilities, and for most satisfactory expression of his particular personality.

In "managing" several children of dissimilar temperaments—whose healthily divergent viewpoints and "drives" are apt to clash explosively at times—wise parents seek to reduce to a minimum the frequency (and the heat) of such conflicts, by hitching those children's respective energies to their several stars. In other words, by steering each child into a pattern of activity that polishes his individual talents, while indirectly serving as his emotional safety valve.

By the time a child reaches school age he should have sufficient sense of being "a person in his own right," to strike out spontaneously making friends for himself,—without special regard for how well or ill his older or younger brothers and sisters are handling their social life. Properly viewed, a child does not "belong" to his parents; nor should he be viewed as "bound by blood ties" to his brothers and sisters. By the fortuitous circumstance of his birth into that specific group, he has an inalienable necessity,—and, most often, a sentimental desire,—to adapt harmoniously (or as best he can) to their idiosyncracies.

But he has a more powerful natural compulsion to relate himself to life and humankind in the largest social, or world, sense—in terms of his own intrinsic aptitudes and aspirations. And, in my opinion, any parent would be acting unfairly as well as unwisely in requiring one child to make endlessly chafing and personally sacrificial concessions to another child in the same household, simply because one is "the older" and the other "the younger" (or vice versa).

Yet it seems this is what you are asking of your older boy,—in trying to saddle him with a nursemaid's responsibilities almost, toward his obstreperous younger brother, when his whole inclination is to "mind his own business." Instead of promoting "companionability" by such means, it is far more probable you are sowing the seeds of increasing hostility. Whereas the older boy might tolerate the younger one amiably, as a sometime "pain in the neck,"—if you assumed full responsibility for making him behave,—he could hardly be blamed for growing to resent his very existence, if he must "drag him along," and be embarrassed by his hoodum conduct, everywhere he goes.

Just because of his easygoing disposition, I suppose the older boy has a sufficiency of friends his own age, whereas the younger boy—because of his noisy, restless, egotistic, chip-on-shoulder temperament—probably is shunted aside by children in his age group. And if such is the case, it certainly doesn't follow that the older boy has a responsibility to supply the younger with some social life, at constant expense to his own self-respect and peace of mind. On the contrary, the fact that the younger would want, or need, to "tag along" after his older brother, creating dissension among the latter's friends, merely emphasizes his need of being "taken in hand" by his parents working in cooperation with his teachers, and deftly trained to a more profitable and winsome brand of behavior.

Lastly, remember this: children born of the same parents are not necessarily sufficiently alike, or even sufficiently different, to be basically congenial. The conglomerate heritage of each, from countless ancestors, may accidentally result in personalities of supreme compatability, on the one hand, or of extreme repulsion, on the other hand. And in the latter event, no amount of parental forcing is going to make them "buddies." It is far better to train them to a civilized "live and let live" policy in their domestic dealings, and to pleasantly stress and develop their distinctly different personalities, by guiding them into separate lines of activity that will evolve naturally into different "sets" of friends. M. H.

Movie Heroes State Their Peeves In Women's Dress

Hollywood, Calif.—Whether all this striving for beauty is done to please the male sex or the ladies themselves will probably remain forever the secret it has always been. But a little jolt from the men now and then will never go amiss. So here are a few "pet aversions" of some well known screen stars:

"Slacks are all right," says Humphrey Bogart, "but fancy lounging pajamas should never appear in public. A woman might as well trail down the street in her negligee.

"Makeup in public? Well, it's all right for a girl to powder her nose or touch up her lips, but as to combing her hair and wielding a mascara brush in plain view . . . there's nothing like it for destroying a man's illusions about a girl he rather fancied."

Even the usually silent Gary Cooper, star of "Meet John Doe," has a word to say, and about fingernails.

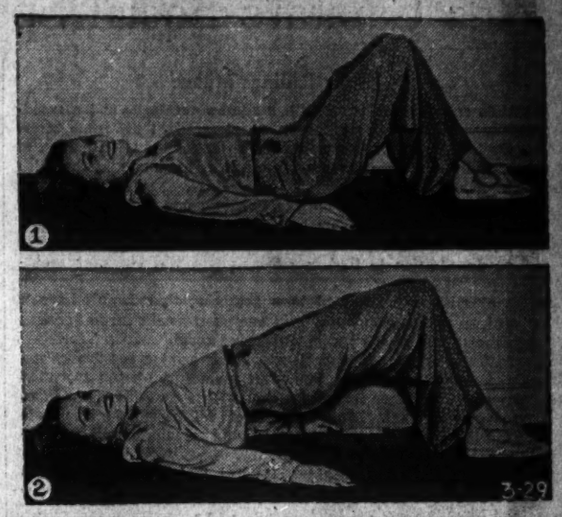
Right Kind of Walk Is First Aid to Business Girl

Miss Claudia Morgan (left), who portrays the ideal secretary in a current Broadway hit, thinks that posture is most important for the business girl. She points out that the manner in which an applicant walks into an office often determines whether she gets or misses a job. The walk, she maintains, reveals characteristics of timidity, confidence, carlessness, laziness, energy or dejection. At right — Miss Morgan demonstrates an exercise that will help the most desk-bound secretary to keep an impressive figure and to have perfect posture. The bumps, she says, keeps the figure from getting dumpy



Claudia Morgan, Who Plays Secretary In Stage Hit, Tells How to Move With Grace, Confidence and Poise

By Ida Jean Kain

THE THEATER is the last place in the world the business girl would ordinarily look for pointers on how to get ahead as a secretary. But there is a theatrical saying that "an actress' walk accounts for 50 per cent of the characterization." And it is not incompatible with the observation of a top-flight personnel director that "many an applicant walks herself out of a job before she gets so far as filling a blank."

Since walking is obviously an important factor in either—or any—career, the white-collar girl can learn a lot from her more glamorous sister on the stage. And there is no actress better qualified to teach the right secretarial stance than Claudia Morgan, member of the famous Morgan family of actors, who is now acting as secretary to the hilariously cantankerous "Man Who Came to Dinner."

Must Reflect Importance

"The secretary to an important executive," says Miss Morgan, who has made a study of this career for her role, "must manage to reflect something of the importance of his position. After all, she is his go-between. She must act for him in the preliminary dealings with other important men. To do that successfully, she must have poise and confidence—and the expression of both qualities depends on the way she walks. Unless she walks with authority, she has none!"

It is the conviction of this actress that walking well is an individual matter—"but the first step is probably the study of oneself off guard. The minute one thinks about it, it is hard not to correct the carriage, but an effort should be made to walk naturally before a full-length mirror, or to study one's reflection in the shop windows. If a woman can see herself in her natural walk, it is easy to detect what is wrong and there is a ready-made incentive to correct it.

Slump Is General

Generally speaking, there is a tendency to slump and to let the hips jut out in back, so that the figure is out of line. A few simple exercises to strengthen the muscles so that erect posture becomes easy may be in order. A simple but effective posture exercise is to lie on the floor on the back, knees flexed and feet on floor near the buttocks. Begin by pushing the small of the back down against the floor. Then, very slowly, raise the hips off the floor until the body is in a straight line from chest to toes. Hold for a minute, then, almost vertebra by vertebra, lower spine to floor again and relax.

When you become more flexible try tossing the feet overhead and attempt to touch toes to floor beyond the head. Those are the only exercises Claudia Morgan does. But in addition she walks with MacTavish — a personable Scotty—for 2 to 3 miles every day and plays a snappy game of tennis. "It's not much," she says, "but it keeps me from sitting—sitting is what puts on the pounds!" It's a good exercise program. I wish all of you followed one nearly as adequate.

As extra tips for "walking with authority"—take your cue from this actress and "never stand with legs apart! Or wear too high heels to the office. Extremely high heels make a girl teeter—and that makes her look uncertain."

Fragile Effect in Hats and Blouses

New York (AP).—Hats and blouses compete for the title, "most fragile." Marquisette, tulle, mousseline de soie, all in water color pastels, are used on both hats and blouses, along with lace and (or) flowers.

Ruffles appear everywhere—at hemlines, peeping out under suit sleeves, running all the way down the front of slim evening dresses. Besides, of course, being practically a must at the throat. Little peplums give a ruffy effect to slender-line dresses.

How to Give Bride's Shower

ANNOUNCING an engagement? Spring the news with a "lid's off" party!

What a splash you can make giving parties—for showers, birthdays and anniversaries, too—when you have on hand clever new ideas for entertainment.

The special trick of the "lid's off" party is one you can easily manage yourself—with ordinary half-pint ice cream cartons!

Put in each a heart-shaped card saying, "Lid's off! John and Ann!" Then, using flowered paper and gauzy bows, fix up some of the cartons to look like Frenchy hat boxes. Those are for the women guests. For the men's boxes use plain bright paper, smart ribbons and hunting scenes cut from magazines.

Put a box, tagged with the guest's name, at each place, and for your centerpiece have a garden hat filled with flowers. Now all's set for the surprise—the opening of the boxes, the reading of the news!

Or do you have a bridal shower on your program? Fun to give a kitchen shower, presided over by a huge "mammy" built of brooms and mops. Easy to make her!

Irish Legation Affair for Gen. Aiken Holds Capital's Social Spotlight

By Hope Ridings Miller.

A TALL, engaging Irishman with a narrow mustache and a receding hairline took over Washington's social spotlight yesterday afternoon. He is Gen. Frank Aiken, Irish Minister for the Coordination of Defense, and the occasion was a large tea in his honor at the Irish Legation.

Whether the Irish Minister and Mrs. Robert Brennan are entertaining a handful of guests at tea, or half of Washington at a diplomatic reception, the party always is one to remember with a special glow of pleasure. In addition to that, yesterday's fete was one of the outstanding parties of the season.

"What a relief—to be invited to a gathering that doesn't have 'a cause' tied up with it somehow," said one guest as she made her way through the throng in the spacious drawing room.

The Irish envoy, Mrs. Brennan, wearing a print crepe frock, and Gen. Aiken greeted guests in the small room just off the reception hall. I wanted to linger for a real chat with Gen. Aiken, but there was no chance for that. Diplomats and official Washingtonians were coming by the dozens, and presently I found myself joining the cavalcade toward the dining room.

Looking back over my shoulder, I noted that Mrs. Brennan was greeting the Minister of Luxembourg and Mme. Le Gallais; then the Portuguese Minister and Mme. Bianchi.

AFTER BEING RECEIVED most of the guests collected and stayed in the flower-decked drawing room. I saw Justice and Mrs. William O. Douglas there, making the rounds quickly and then bidding friends goodby. They had to get home in time to entertain at dinner before last evening's performance of the National Ballet. Mrs. Robert Taft was a popular center of attention at the tea, as were Sir Gerald and Lady Campbell, of the British Embassy, and Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark.

"Gen. Aiken is here to buy guns, isn't he?" someone asked.

"He's here to buy wheat, I understand," said the German Minister Charge d'Affaires, Hans Thomsen. The latter, accompanied by Frau Thomsen, put in an early appearance and made the rounds in record time.

Shortly after the Thomsens went down the receiving line, the British Minister-Counselor and Mrs. Neville Butler came in. As Herr Thomsen left the drawing room he passed them. Nobody seemed to see anybody else; diplomacy came off with flying colors, and there was no "incident." However, I heard Minister Butler observe in a surprised tone, half to himself, "Why, that was the German Charge. Mrs. Butler replied, but what she said was lost in the mumble of voices all around.

DIPLOMATIC Washington was well represented at the party. I saw Senora de Espil, wearing a sable jacket over a smart navy blue frock. A matching sailor, trimmed in green, accented her becoming ensemble. Senhora de Martins was smartly turned out in a gray frock and jacket set off with a natty little red hat.

Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone was among the guests; also Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, Miss Eleanor Connolly, Lady Broderick and her pretty daughter, Sheila, and the Canadian Counselor and Mrs. Merchant Mahoney.

Presiding at the flower-decked tea table when I went in were Mrs. Wilbur Carr and Mrs. Peter Drury. Later, Mrs. Sven Yort, one of the three Brennan daughters, took her turn at pouring tea. Senator and Mrs. W. Worth Clark were among those present; also Senator Arthur Capper, Representative and Mrs. Mike Monroney, Representative and Mrs. Joseph E. Casey, Mrs. Sherman Miles, Mrs. Claude Pepper and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke.

Among those arriving early were Mrs. Henry Stimson and Mrs. Frank Knox, who stepped up to the tea table to be served at almost the same time. Mme. Eriegun was there, accompanied by Mlle. Emel Tek. Still others I saw were Senora de Michels and her daughter, Senorita Cristina Michels; Senora de Pastoriza, Senora de Caceres, Mrs. Nellie Taylor Ross, Senora de Baron, Miss Pauletta Guffey and many, many others.

Phillipses To See N. Y. Art Exhibit

Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Phillips will go to New York tomorrow to attend the opening of an exhibit of paintings by Mrs. Phillips on Monday at the Bignou Gallery, 32 East Fifty-seventh Street. The exhibit will run until April 18 and the artist and her husband will remain in New York for several days.

This is the first exhibit which Mrs. Phillips has held in New York for almost ten years. Shown will be pictures loaned by the Phillips Gallery of Washington, Mrs. L. Corrin Strong, Mrs. Blair Lee, Mrs. Daniel Partridge and others, as well as some owned by Mrs. Phillips. She is represented at the Yale Museum of Fine Arts, The Whitney Museum of American Art, and in many private collections. Mrs. Phillips has exhibited at the Denver Museum of Art, the Corcoran Gallery, the Golden Gate Exposition and the New York World's Fair.

Benefit Given By Mrs. Eustis

The old, yellow stone house of Mrs. William Corcoran Eustis, in Georgetown, was opened for a large tea yesterday afternoon. As with most parties in Washington this spring, this was for a cause—the American committee for British Catholic relief.

With so many of the English churches damaged or blown completely to bits, American Catholics hope to raise funds to help the priests over there carry on their work. An American committee for British Catholic relief has been formed, and yesterday plans were discussed to start a local chapter.

A guest from New York, Charles Gouverneur Paulding, literary editor of the Commonweal, gave a brief talk on the committee's work. Also present was Mrs. Frederick Schenck, chairman of the Washington movement. Her daughter is married to David Huxley, half brother of Julian and Aldous Huxley, and lives in England. Mrs. Schenck also has spent a good deal of time in the British Isles.

Mrs. Eustis yesterday wore a black gown, made on simple lines. Assisting her at the tea table were Mrs. Corcoran Thom and Mrs. William Grinnell. Members of the Washington committee, many of whom were present yesterday, include Mrs. Foster Stearns, Mrs. Irwin Laughlin, Princess Boncompagni, Mrs. John Walker, Miss Maria Ewing and Mrs. George Scriven.

A Bit of Tea for China

Harris & Ewing.

Mrs. Millard Tydings, wife of the Senator from Maryland, offers a cup of the steaming beverage to Mme. K. W. Yu, wife of the Second Secretary of the Chinese Embassy, while Mrs. Lister Hill, wife of the Senator from Alabama, looks on from the background. The event was a tea yesterday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Davies for the benefit of United China Relief

Mrs. Tydings Entertains

The lovely home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Davies—which houses their incredible collection of Russian jewels and tapestries—was the scene of a tea given yesterday afternoon by Mrs. Millard Tydings, wife of Senator Tydings, of Maryland. The party was for members of the senatorial committee for the Chinese relief benefit to be given at Constitution Hall on April 27.

Guest of honor was to have been Mrs. T. V. Soong, but she was called to New York unexpectedly. However, a number of ladies from the Chinese Embassy—picturesquely turned out in their native dress—lent an Oriental touch to the tea and committee meeting.

Mrs. Tydings received in the palm-decked foyer, wearing a simple black frock and wide ruffled collar of crisp white organdie. Following the meeting guests gathered in the dining room, which has gray blue walls and ivory damask curtains. The tea table was centered with a bouquet of tawny snapdragons and yellow calla lilies. Pouring tea was Mrs. Warren Austin, who wore a mauve ensemble. Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Vice President, dropped in for a short while. She wore a smart dark blue ensemble and her hat was trimmed with red. Mrs. Charles McNary was among the early arrivals.

Preceding the tea, Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, who wore a powder blue hat, spoke, as did Mrs. Tydings. One of the most attractive hats in the gathering was worn by Mrs. D. Worth Clark. Instead of boasting the usual flowers, it was trimmed with bunches of fruit—fashioned of gayly colored feathers. Others there included Mrs. Alva B. Adams, Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Mrs. Alben Barkley, Mrs. James F. Byrnes, Mrs. Irene Caldwell, Mrs. William J. Bulow, of South Dakota, and Mrs. Bennet Champ Clark.

Capital Whirl

By Sally Swift

VERY GAY and informal was the cocktail party given the other afternoon by the Walter Lippmanns in honor of Ruth Draper and her nephew and costar, Paul Draper. Miss Draper is small and dark, with huge brown eyes and, like all the truly great, is very modest about her attainments. Sitting on a stool at the Lippmanns' fireside, she was chatting with friends new and old when Countess Palffy came over to ask, "What time do you go on tonight?" "Oh," said Miss Draper, "don't come tonight. You were there last night and twice in a row is too much to expect of a friend. Wait and come again the last night." Countess Palffy replied firmly, "I am coming with a friend who is waiting on the phone, and I only require you to tell me the hour you appear."

Toward the end of the party, when Miss Draper and Mr. Draper had left to make ready for their evening performance, a group settled down around the fire in the drawing room with the air of "now-we-have-to-be-content-with-local-talent." Suddenly the door opened and in walked Noel Coward, with Mrs. Hendricks Eustis in tow—or perhaps it was the other way around. Mr. Coward sat down on the stool just vacated by Ruth Draper—from now on that particular stool will rank in my mind with the "seats of the mighty"—and began telling us about his recent trip to Australia. I suppose it is easy to be natural with a few people when one has been facing huge audiences for years, but nontheless everyone was enchanted with the simplicity of both Mr. Coward and Miss Draper.

MRS. EUSTIS herself received a warm welcome from friends who have missed her very much since the days (early New Deal) when she was one of Washington's most popular hostesses. She looked as pretty as a picture in a navy blue costume with a matching hat topped by a pink rose, and was beaming with pride in her new job with Mrs. Dwight Davis at the Red Cross. Mrs. Eustis has taken Mrs. Emmons Smith's apartment on Massachusetts Avenue for the month of April, while Mrs. Smith is off visiting in the Dominican Republic. The latter will sail from New York on April 3, on the S. S. Coamo, for a month's visit with the United States Minister tothe Dominican Republic and Mrs. Robert Scotten.

To return to Washington and the Lippmanns' party: Mrs. Lucius Wilmerding, very smart in a tailored navy frock with a white collar and wearing a becoming new, smooth hair-do, helped the hostess see that everyone had tea or any preferred beverage. Among the guests were Justice Frank Murphy, Madame Diamantopoulos, wife of the Greek Minister; Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse, Mrs. Pirie, wife of the British Air Attache; Mrs. Ernest K. Lindley and Alexis Leger, former Undersecretary of the French Foreign Office. Also present were John Thacher, Winthrop Crane, Lucius Wilmerding, Joseph Alsop, Ronald Lyman and a number of others.

Making a short visit to Washington on business is Capt. Pierre Benech, former Naval Attache of the French Embassy. Capt. Benech is stopping with Baron James Baeyens at his house in Georgetown and was guest of honor at a small cocktail party which Baron Baeyens arranged the other afternoon. Baroness Baeyens is in Hot Springs, with her children, for spring vacation, so Baron Baeyens did the honors alone.

Lacys Welcome Trentham Back With Party

Noel Trentham, former Financial Counselor of the British Embassy, was welcomed back to Washington at the cocktail party given yesterday afternoon by Mr. and Mrs. William Lacy. Mr. Trentham is now chief of the financial censorship in Bermuda, and Mrs. Trentham and their two baby daughters remained behind there while he came to this county on business. He is at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lacy for a day or two before returning to Bermuda.

Mr. and Mrs. Lacy entertained yesterday at their house on Massachusetts Avenue. The hostess wore a black suit dress, street length. Among the guests were Mr. Lacy's father, Sterling Lacy, and Mrs. Lacy of Leesburg.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Houghteling stopped by on their way to the station to meet a son coming home from college. Mrs. Donald Downs, who is just back after a stay in New York, chatted with Miss Betty Beale.

Mrs. Anthony Rumbold, wearing a black tailored suit, stopped by for a drink. Ralph Snowden Hill was talking about the successful fashion show given at the Brazilian Embassy the day before.

Mrs. Sims Snow wore a black and white spring print and a little black hat crowned with white flowers. Mrs. Newbold Walmsley and Mme. Molekamp also had chosen dresses which spelled spring. Mrs. William MacCracken was accompanied by Mr. MacCracken, and other couples included M. and Mme. Boncesco, Dr. and Mrs. Kurt Hetzel, she wearing a becoming pale pink hat with her dark dress, and Baron and Baroness Stackelberg, who are giving a cocktail party tonight before the benefit supper at the home of Mrs. Frederick Mitchell Gould. Also present were George Abell, John Stonborough, Dr. Eugene de Savitch, Miss Diana Rowland, in black with a veil trimmed hat, Mrs. William T. Mann, in gray, Anthony de Balasy and many more.

W. O. Douglases Entertain Before Attending Ballet

Justice and Mrs. William O. Douglas entertained at dinner last night at their home in Silver Spring. Later they took their guests to the performance of the National Ballet.

In the company were Justice and Mrs. Stanley Reed, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Louchheim, Mr. and Mrs. Chester Lane, Mrs. Bruce Smith, Lowell Mellett and Stuart Guthrie.

Luncheon Given By Miss McNutt

Miss Louise McNutt, daughter of the Federal Security Administrator and Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, entertained at a small luncheon yesterday. Honor guest was Miss Ann Wickard, daughter of the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Claude Wickard, who has been widely feted during her week's stay here on vacation from Purdue University.

Guests also included Miss Frances Cox, Miss Patricia Grady and Miss Caroline George. The party was given in the McNutts' apartment in the Shoreham.

Dinner Is Given By Sheppards

Senator and Mrs. Morris Sheppard entertained at dinner last evening in honor of their daughter, Miss Lucile Sheppard and Arthur H. Keyes, jr., who will be married this afternoon at 4 o'clock at the Sheppard home on Nineteenth Street.

The party followed the rehearsal and guests included relatives and friends who are in Washington especially to attend the wedding.

Frosts Sail Today For Paraguay Post

The Minister of Paraguay and Senora de Soler are in New York to bid farewell to the newly appointed U. S. Minister to Paraguay, Wesley Frost, and Mrs. Frost, who sail today for their new station.

Senator Holman, Daughter Honored

Senator Rufus C. Holman, of Oregon, and his daughter, Mrs. Harold Burkitt, were honored last evening at a small dinner given by Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Amos A. Fries at their home on Woodley Road.

Mrs. Burkitt, who is here on a visit to her father from her home in Portland, Oreg., is accompanied by her two children, Harold and Barbara. They will return to Oregon shortly after the Easter holidays.

The British Ambassador and Lady Halifax will leave New York today and will go to Brook Lawn, the country home of W. Plunkett Stewart, well known breeder of horses, near Unionville, Pa. They will rest there for a few days after a strenuous stay in New York, during which they toured the city and the Ambassador made several speeches. It was the first time he had visited Manhattan.

The Chief of Naval Operations and Mrs. Harold Stark were honor guests at the dinner party given last evening by the Japanese Ambassador, Admiral Nomura.

The Counselor of the Canadian Legation and Mrs. Merchant Mahoney will entertain at a luncheon today at their home on Garfield Street.

Mr. and Mrs. Woodson P. Houghton, of Washington, are in New York, where they are staying at the Ritz-Carlton.

Julia Walker Is Married To Dr. Linton

Easter lilies and palms adorned the altar of the Covenant-First Presbyterian Church last evening for the candlelight wedding of Miss Julia Myra Walker and Dr. Calvin Darlington Linton. The bride is the daughter of Paul A. Walker, a member of the Federal Communications Commission, and Mrs. Walker. Dr. Linton is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Irwin H. Linton. The Rev. Albert J. McCartney officiated at the 8 o'clock ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an ivory satin gown cut on simple lines and ending in a long train. The small Peter Pan collar was of real lace and beaded with seed pearls. Her tulle veil was held by a tiara of lace and clusters of fresh orange blossoms sent her from Winterhaven, Fla., by the bridegroom's aunt, Mrs. Floyd Williams. The bride carried a bouquet of white orchids, lilies of the valley and roses.

Sister Serves As Maid of Honor

Miss Virginia Jane Walker served as maid of honor for her sister, and bridesmaids were the Misses Mary Benton Gord, Marjorie Mann, Zoe McCombs, Dorothy Von Wold and Patricia Farrell. They all wore rose frocks of paper taffeta, made with a fitted bodice, sweetheart neck and full skirt. They wore wreaths of talisman roses and delphinium in their hair and the bridesmaids carried bouquets of talisman roses. Miss Walker, however, carried an armful of roses and delphinium.

Dr. I. Grier Linton, of Charleston, S. C., was best man for his brother. Mrs. Linton sang several solos preceding the ceremony. Ushers were Francis Ingalls, Joseph R. Wolfenger, of Baltimore; A. A. Murphree, of Baltimore; Dr. Thomas Pyles, of Maryland; Robert L. Henning, Paul A. Walker, jr., brother of the bride, and Donald Leecraft, of Oklahoma.

Reception Follows Wedding Ceremony

A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents on Forty-third Street. Mrs. Walker received, wearing a hyacinth blue lace gown with a cluster of orchids. Mrs. Linton chose a periwinkle blue frock for the occasion and she, too, wore orchids. When the couple left on their Southern honeymoon the bride wore a dark blue ensemble and a cluster of orchids. They will live in Charlotte, N. C.

The bride was graduated from Holton Arms School and George Washington University, where she was a member of Pi Beta Phi. She is the niece of Judge Robert L. Williams, former Governor of Oklahoma. Dr. Linton attended Erskine College and George Washington University. He received his Ph. D. and master's degrees from Johns Hopkins University. He is head of the English Department of Queens College in North Carolina. The bridegroom is the grandson of the late Mr. and Mrs. Irwin B. Linton, of this city, and of Dr. William Moffet Grier, one-time President of Erskine College. Dr. Linton is also a cousin of Dr. Robert Calvin Grier, who has been president of Erskine College since 1921.

Miss Chatfield-Taylor Is Wed To J. M. Kernochan in Virginia

Wearing a gown which had been made from the wedding dress of her mother, Mrs. Wayne Chatfield-Taylor, and her grandmother, the late Mrs. George Blow, Miss Adelaide Chatfield-Taylor was married yesterday morning to John Marshall Kernochan.

The ceremony took place at 11:30 at the historic Bruton Parish Church in Williamsburg, Va. Mrs. Chatfield-Taylor inherited a beautiful old home, York House, in nearby Yorktown, and the family always attended the Bruton Parish Church when they stayed there. The home was sold recently by Mrs. Chatfield-Taylor to her brother, Richard Blow, and it was there that the reception was held after the wedding.

The blonde, slender bride was given in marriage by her father, who is Undersecretary of Commerce. Her gown was of ivory satin and old lace, with a very full skirt and long sleeves. Lace trimming on the bodice formed an apron effect in front and the same lace edged the tulle veil, which was trimmed in orange blossoms. The bride carried a prayer book bound in white which had white camellias on the top and a shower of freesia and small camellias.

Rose Chatfield-Taylor Is Maid of Honor

Her maid of honor and only attendant was her sister, Miss Rose Chatfield-Taylor. The latter wore aqua blue crepe fashioned with a full skirt and fitted bodice. She completed her ensemble with a large picture hat of leghorn straw trimmed with pink roses to match her bouquet. Marshall Kernochan, of New York and Tuxedo Park, N. Y., was best man for his son.

Only members of the two families and out-of-town guests attended the wedding and the breakfast which followed. The house was filled with vases of spring blossoms, and many guests wandered into the old high-walled garden with its walks lined with boxwood.

Mrs. Chatfield-Taylor chose for the occasion a frock of gray wool crepe and a matching hat trimmed with pink flowers. Mrs. Kernochan was attired in beige wool crepe with a hat of the same shade.

Among the guests at the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. George Waller Blow and Richard Blow, of New York; Mrs. William Davies Sohier, sister of Mr. Chatfield-Taylor, and her two daughters, Mrs. Channing Frothingham, jr., and Mrs. Thomas J. Davis, jr., of Boston; Mr. and Mrs. Philip Armour, of Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Hatch, of Schenectady, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Wilson, of Baltimore, and Dr. John Stewart Bryan, president of William and Mary College.

To Make Home In Cambridge

After a honeymoon, the young couple will be at home in Cambridge, Mass., until June, when the bridegroom will be graduated from Harvard University. He is an alumnus of St. Mark's School and a member of the Fly Club at Harvard. His family has been prominent in New York and Tuxedo Park for several generations.

Mrs. Kernochan, who attended Bennington College until her engagement was announced a few weeks ago, made her debut here at a garden reception in 1939. She also was presented to society in Lake Forest, Ill., where her family has been prominent in social and civic circles. She is a granddaughter of Hobart Chatfield-Taylor, formerly of Chicago and now a resident of California.

Mrs. Ferrandou, Daughter Return

Mrs. Alfred Ferrandou and her daughter, Miss Mary Ann Ferrandou, have returned to Washington after spending the winter in New Orleans, Mrs. Ferrandou's former home.

Richmond U. Girls End Capital Visit Tomorrow

Fifty girls from Westhampton College, University of Richmond, will have "something to write home about" when they return to school tomorrow night, at the end of their three-day pilgrimage to Washington.

They are from all four classes in the college and are here as guests of the Westhampton Alumnae Association. May Thompson Evans, former assistant director of the women's division of the Democratic National Committee and also national president of the association, has the role of the Old Lady Who Lived in a Shoe, during their stay in the Capital. Yesterday, armed with a megaphone which served as her individual loudspeaker equipment, she piloted the girls on their visits to some of the important places in Washington. Miss Frances Burnette, local alumnae president, and others members assisted her.

The visit of the girls was planned as more than a sightseeing trip. It was designed to give them a deep and unforgettable sense of appreciation of their Government, said Mrs. Evans.

Yesterday morning, when they arrived, they were welcomed by Vice President and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, in the Vice President's office. Later they had luncheon in the Speaker's dining room at the Capitol with Senator Hattie Caraway, Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, of Massachusetts, and Representative Jeannette Rankin, of Montana, as guests of honor.

Senator Caraway told them some of her experiences in the Senate, especially in connection with support of the lend-lease bill. Representative Rogers, predicting a continuous year-long session of Congress, advised the girls to express themselves in letters to their representatives in Congress. Representative Rankin stressed the responsibility of women for doing their part in preserving those things which make the world worth living in.

Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn, who was among the men members of Congress who stopped in during the luncheon to greet the girls, declared that "every American boy and every American girl should come to Washington at some time during his school period as part of his education." Representative Clifton Woodrum, of Virginia, expressed a similar opinion, in a brief greeting to the girls. Others who stopped in to speak to them during the luncheon were Representatives Dave Satterfield, Thomas G. Burch and Willis Robertson, of Virginia, and Robert T. Secrest, of Ohio.

The students presented to Senator Caraway and Representative Secrest, chairman of the Library Committee of the House, a petition urging the passage of the bills providing for a youth reference division in the Library of Congress, to provide research and reference assistance to those seeking information on the needs, problems, activities and attitudes of young people of the United States.

After a tour of the Capitol and visit to the Supreme Court Building, where they were greeted by Associate Justice Hugo Black, in his office, and a visit to the Folger Library, the girls had dinner at the Women's National Democratic Club, 1526 New Hampshire Avenue. There, honor guests, each of whom spoke briefly, were Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, director of the Mint; Miss Harriet Elliott, of the National Defense Advisory Commission; Mrs. Blair Banister, assistant treasurer of the United States; Mrs. Jewell Swofford, chairman of the U. S. Employes Compensation Commission; Miss Jo Coffin, assistant to the Public Printer; Judge Lucy Howorth and Judge Carroll Stewart, of the board of veterans appeals, and Mrs. Florence Kerr, assistant commissioner of the Works Projects Administration.

Today their itinerary will include a visit to the White House, various Government departments, the National Gallery of Art and the Corcoran and the Freer Art Galleries.

Author to Lecture

Theodore Maynard, author and lecturer, will speak at the Playhouse, 1814 N Street Northwest, on Tuesday evening, April 22, under the auspices of the Study Guild Catholic Library. Shoppers Hear Mine Safety Law Discussed

The passage of the mine safety bill was hailed as a step in the direction of reducing the number of mine catastrophes in an address yesterday by Tom O'Conner, of the staff of PM, before the League of Women Shoppers. Mr. O'Conner, speaking at the league's meeting late yesterday afternoon at the Y. W. C. A., described miners and mine conditions as he had found them in the investigations he carried on for a recent series of articles he wrote for his newspaper.

Although the mine safety bill will not do away with mine catastrophes, the number will be lessened as the United States Bureau of Mines works out its cooperation with the mine operators, he predicted.

The next major campaign in the interest of mine safety must be for legislation providing not only Government inspection of the mines, but giving the Government power to enforce safety rules, he declared. Until this is done, and the Federal Government has power to close the mines until the operators have complied with safety recommendations, mine catastrophes never will be wiped out, Mr. O'Conner asserted.

Mr. O'Conner's talk followed a business meeting of the league in charge of Mrs. Mordecai Ezekiel, the president.

Newcomb Club To Hold Favorite Recipe Luncheon

The Newcomb Club of Bethesda, will hold a "Favorite Recipe" covered dish luncheon, with recipe attached, at the Battery Park Club House, next Friday.

Mrs. Bernard J. Oliver has charge of the luncheon, assisted by Mrs. H. H. Curry, Mrs. W. Ross Dellett and Mrs. J. B. McPherson. A friendly exchange of surplus plants will be carried on among the members, assisted by the conservation chairman, Mrs. L. B. Jackson.

A rummage sale, in charge of Mrs. William H. Winkler, is being held next week, proceeds of which are to go toward the student loan fund operated by the club.

Many sweaters are being knitted by the members for the Red Cross under the chairmanship of Mrs. J. K. O'Shaughnessy, and ten dresses for the welfare work in the county will have been completed by this meeting. Mrs. Jerome F. Barnard, public welfare chairman has been in charge of the work.

Newspaper Women Will Hold 'At Home'

The first of a series of Sunday afternoon at homes will be inaugurated by the Newspaper Women's Club tomorrow at its new headquarters, 1604 Twentieth Street, for members and guests, from 5 to 7 p. m.

Thursday and Saturday of next week, tea and sandwiches will be served informally to members and their guests during the tea hour.

Argentine Meat Ban Is Removed

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

The urgent pleas of Undersecretary of State Welles and other high defense officials were heeded yesterday as the Senate Appropriations Committee struck out of an Army-Navy supply bill a virtual prohibition against the importation of Argentine canned beef and Australian wool.

In addition to making this foreign policy gesture, the committee moved to please the domestic farmer by favorably reporting a $449,786,707 increase in the 1942 agricultural bill. The measure was thus raised to a total of $1,340,610,744—over $303,000,000 above last year's grant and more than $444,000,000 above the President's budget estimate.

Increased Grants

Through its action yesterday, the Appropriations Committee increased by $238,000,000 the total grants and authorizations which the House made for "parity" payments. The committee also wiped out the House-approved authorizations, and voted the entire sum in cash.

Under the revised bill, farmers would get an additional $150,000,000 for "parity" this year (bringing the total for this purpose during the current year to $362,000,000), and would be assured an even $300,000,000 (instead of $212,000,000) for next year.

Senator Russell (Democrat), of Georgia, sponsor of the "parity" increases, said yesterday that first payments for 1941 would be made in two weeks. If the additional $150,000,000 for "parity" for the current year is finally approved, he said the farmer will get approximately 75 per cent of "parity" for wheat and cotton, 86 per cent for corn, 83 per cent for rice, and from 82 to 94 per cent for tobacco. ("Parity" is the price that would give farm products the same purchasing power as in 1909-14.)

Another Fight Presaged

The committee's refusal to approve a House provision in the $4,000,000,000 Army-Navy bill directed against Argentine and Australian wool and Argentine beef presaged another fight on the Senate floor. A less drastic prohibition (which dealt only with food and not with clothing) was striken from a naval bill last week by a one-vote margin in the Senate, and is still awaiting action by House-Senate conferees.

Undersecretary Welles told the Senate subcommittee holding hearings on the beef and wool proposal that import restrictions of the type suggested "would seriously undermine the efforts our Government is making, in cooperation with the other American republics, to strengthen our hemisphere defenses."

"If the bill, when enacted, contains an embargo measure of this character, it would be construed by our friends and neighbors in many parts of this hemisphere as proof positive that our publicly announced desire to further economic cooperation between the American republics in this time of stress amounts to nothing more than words and will not be carried out in fact," the Undersecretary warned.

If Congress fails to remove the prohibition, "it will impair your efforts?" asked Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina.

"To a degree which I cannot exaggerate," Welles responded.

Undersecrtary of War Patterson urged abolition of the provision because it would "interfere with the speedy performance" and "unreasonably increase the cost" of the national defense program.

And Donald Nelson, OPM director of purchases, warned that it would "raise in an unwarranted manner the price to consumers all over the country."

Speaking of wool, he said, "my opinion is that the price structure in this country is just ready to burst."

Overtime Is Asked For D. C. Drivers

The United Federal Workers of America, a C. I. O. affiliate, yesterday asked the District to pay its drivers working more than 40 hours a week time and a half for overtime.

Meeting with the District Wage Board, which is headed by Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways, the U. F. W. A. delegation maintained that overtime without pay is a violation of the 40-hour law, passed in 1934 and put into effect in 1937 after the Comptroller General ruled that it applied to the District government. Capt. Whitehurst last night said the matter was being studied by his board.

The union also requested that overtime pay for snow removal should be granted to all men and that some should not be forced to take leave without pay in order to avoid overtime.

Vicar of Famous London Church Tells Of Great Courage Shown by City's Mothers

WRECKAGE OF ST. HALLOWS CHURCH—Two German air raids made a shambles of St. Hallows Church, on Tower Hill, London. "But we haven't missed a service," said the Rev. Michael Coleman, pastor, who arrived 12 days ago in Halifax and is now in Washington for a visit

The morale of the British people shows no signs of cracking, and they don't doubt their ultimate victory, the Rev. Michael Coleman, of London, said yesterday in an interview.

Acting vicar of famous All Hallows Church on Tower Hill, London, he has seen the building smashed in three raids and his own house nearby destroyed—"but we haven't missed a service," he added.

Landing at Halifax 12 days ago, he is on a speaking tour in Canada on "The Work of London City Churches During the War." After a trip to New York to thank the British War Relief Society for its aid, he came to Washington this week for a brief visit.

Yesterday, puffing cheerfully on his pipe, he told how Londoners are weathering the incessant bombing and remaining optimistic through it all.

He himself has been "blown up or knocked down" 11 times by bombs exploding nearby. Two bits of shrapnel hit his old tin hat. He didn't sleep "in a proper bed" from September until he sailed from Liverpool February 28, but snatched only a few hours of sleep amid his duties at air-raid shelters, holding services, helping to put out fires and other chores.

"We men who have to keep busy nearly all night are the lucky ones," he said. "The ones I admire most are the women, who night after night listen to the bombs, feel the shaking, but calmly look after their children and keep cheerful."

When All Hallows Church, after raids in December, was too shattered to be used for services, the four services a day went on just the same in a nearby building where the church had its offices.

All Hallows Church was heavily encrusted with history. William the Conqueror is said to have been instrumental in the building of the main pillars in the eleventh century. William Penn was baptized there. Samuel Pepys, the famous diarist, had a room in the tower of All Hallows.

"People are losing their possessions—and not caring about material things, for they have the things of the spirit," the Rev. Mr. Coleman said.

"No, the average person isn't a hero. He's scared, just as I'm scared. But he keeps his sense of humor. And you can't help being glad of the ability of human nature to adjust itself to loss," he added.

"I thought my library was necessary to me. I don't have a book left. My house is demolished, with just a depression where the cellar was," he said.

The Rev. Mr. Coleman will speak at St. Stephen's and Incarnation Church at Sixteenth and Newton Streets Northwest at the 11 a. m. service tomorrow. He is visiting friends at 1205 Thomas Circle.

Four D. C. Radio Stations Change

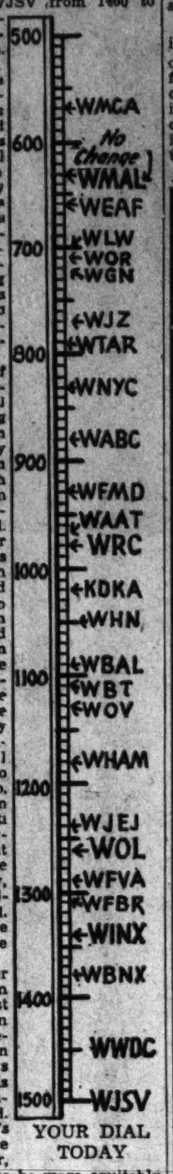
In the new setup WRC moved from 950 to 980 kilocycles; WOL from 1230 to 1280; WINX from 1310 to 1340, and WJSV from 1460 to 1500. Of the Nation's 893 broadcasting stations, 802 are affected.

In his address on "Radio Moving Day" over the Red and Blue networks of the National Broadcasting Co. last night, Fly said the changes provided "a workable solution" to problems of interference among United States stations and those in neighboring countries.

As a result of the North American Regional Broadcasting Agreement in 1937, "every signatory nation emerges with more air room than it had before," Fly said. "The number of channels available to both the United States and to Canada has been increased, and in addition channels in the standard broadcast band have for the first time been specifically assigned by international agreement to Cuba, Mexico, the Dominican Republic, Haiti and, if Newfoundland at some later date decides to ratify, to Newfoundland as well. Thus everyone gains and no one loses. . . .

"The number of channels in the broadcast band has been increased somewhat, and in various ways each channel is to be more intensively used. In short, there's going to be more room on the air, and it's going to be more equitably distributed," he said.



"For listeners, then, the chief advantages will be better service and less interference. Some of it may not become apparent for days or even weeks, until station operations have become stabilized in the new pattern."

The agreement which was reached at a conference in Havana in 1937 "brings to North American broadcasting as a whole the same orderly and systematic allocation of channels which has heretofore governed allocations within the United States," he said.

"Bootleg" stations are outlawed, Fly said, after having explained that at least a dozen such stations "have been in operation along our borders, using 'superpower' and aiming their signal directly at this country by the use of directional antennas. Thus the stability of our whole broadcasting system seemed threatened . . ."

Relationship the Same

Fly pointed out that "you may still be able to hear a few domestic broadcast stations of neighboring countries. Indeed, you will hear some of them distinctly for the first time; for, instead of causing interference, these neighboring transmitters will hereafter fit neatly into the new pattern of channel allocations which now blankets the whole continent.

"Our first guiding principle has been to insure that no station and no listener shall be worse off after the shift than before . . . Secondly, we were determined to disturb the existing pattern of stations as little as possible. Thus, while most stations will change their frequencies, few will change their general position with respect to other stations. Generally, stations from 550 to 720 kilocycles will remain where they are; those from 740 to 780 will step up 10 kilocycles, those from 790 to 870 will step up 20 kilocycles and for those above 870 kilocycles the step-up will be 30 kilocycles."

Among Washington radio mechanics, flat-rate prices for readjustment of push-button sets were quoted from $1 to $3, although some agencies base their prices on the time involved. This will vary with the complexity of the instrument, but in most cases the operation should take about 10 or 15 minutes.

Dr. Brooks Will Preach On Personal Religion

"The Most Important Thing in Personal Religion Today" will be the subject of Dr. Seth R. Brooks, minister of the Universalist National Memorial Church, tomorrow at 11 a. m. The choir will sing "Behold the Lamb of God" by Handel and "O Savior of the World" by Moore. Louise Matter, soprano, and Howard Ludwig, tenor, are soloists. The Young People's Christian Union will meet at 7 p. m. for a fellowship hour and at 8 for a devotional service, after which there will be a "sing" and a question box.

Dr. Paul Scheafrer, minister of the Takoma Park Presbyterian Church, will speak at the midweek Lenten Service on Wednesday evening.

Travel Talk, Movie to Aid Greek Relief

A fascinating record of three years spent in Greece and the Greek Islands, long before the Italians decided to try a similar trip, will be unfolded to a distinguished Washington audience tomorrow night at the Willard Hotel.

Under auspices of Greek war relief headquarters here, B. D. MacDonald, noted world traveler and lecturer, of New York City, will tell of his experiences and illustrate them with 2,200 feet of color motion pictures.

The pictures made by MacDonald, under all types of conditions during his tour, have raised some $18,000 for Greek relief during the past two months. He has appeared from coast to coast and his lecture has been described as a most brilliant portrayal of the Grecian way of living.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt heads the list of individual sponsors and the function will be attended by top-ranking Government officials and diplomats.

The program, to begin at 8:45 p. m. in the main ballroom of the Willard, is under the direction of Mrs. Truxton Beale, of Decatur House, 748 Jackson Place Northwest.

Tickets, which sell for $2.50, are still available at the Greek Relief Headquarters, the Mayflower and Willard Hotel newsstands and through Mrs. Beale.

MacDonald will arrive here at 4:30 p. m. tomorrow. For many years he has traveled through the Near and Middle East filming scenes of interest. His tours have included Yugoslavia, Greece, Turkey, Rumania, Trans-Caucasia, Persia, Irak, Syria and Palestine.

MacDonald will show the Greek people in their everyday life, depicting their courageous spirit and determination to hold to their heritage at all costs.

Life Is Like That!

For years District National Guardsmen drilled in an old and inadequate Pennsylvania Avenue building and prayed for a real armory. Now Washington's new $1,175,000 National Guard Armory will be ready for use in three or four weeks. And the Guard isn't here to see it. The local Guardsmen, called to active training duty in February, are all at camp.

Fogarty dashed after it to find—it was empty and there were no keys.

Defense Rests in Trial Of Doctors

Dr. Brown Says He Quit as GHA Director Because Of 'Interference'

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

The defense rested yesterday in the doctors' trial, ending three weeks of testimony intended to refute the Government's charge that organized medicine criminally conspired against Group Health Association.

To cap their case, defense counsel sent to the witness stand Dr. Henry Rolf Brown, first medical director of G. H. A., to tell the jury that "what they (G. H. A. officials) needed was not a medical director, but a rubber stamp."

Dr. Brown, a Washington physician, was asked by William E. Leahy, head of the battery of lawyers retained by the accused doctors, if he resigned as medical director of the Federal workers' clinic.

He replied that he did—by request.

"I turned in my resignation in the latter part of March, 1938," Dr. Brown told the jury. "I was convalescing from an illness at the time. One day when I went to the HOLC offices, Mr. (William F.) Penniman told me my resignation would be accepted."

Witnessed Request

He said Raymond R. Zimmerman and William C. Kirkpatrick witnessed the request for Dr. Brown's resignation. They and Penniman were officials of the Home Owners Loan Corporation, which launched G. H. A. as a medical care cooperating for HOLC employes.

With oral testimony completed—further documentary evidence may be introduced by the defense Monday—and with "prayers" filed last night with Justice James M. Proctor by counsel for both sides, it appears probable that the jury will receive by next Friday a case unique in the annals of jurisprudence.

Justice Proctor yesterday granted to Leahy and his associates an hour's time Monday morning for the purpose of checking records in the case. The conference will be in Justice Proctor's chambers.

At 11 a. m. Monday, the Government will begin offering rebuttal evidence.

Defendants are the American Medical Association, District Medical Society, five A. M. A. officials and 13 Washington practitioners. After the prosecution rested its case three weeks ago, Justice Proctor cleared by directed verdicts four other defendants—Washington Academy of Surgery, Harris County (Texas) Medical Society, and Drs. Leon A. Martel and J. Rogers Young, of Washington.

On the stand yesterday, Dr. Brown, who is in his 70's, was articulate in his criticism of Group Health Association. An alleged conspiracy to restrain the clinic led to indictment of the organized doctors under the Sherman Act.

Never Interfered, He Says

He said the cooperative's staff physicians were never interfered with by members of the local medical society and that Dr. Raymond E. Selders, G. H. A. surgeon, was not qualified to do general surgery.

Under cross-examination by Kelleher, the witness admitted telling the medical society's executive committee in December, 1937, that Dr. Selders was capable of performing appendectomies.

Two such operations were performer by Dr. Selders at Garfield Hospital, said Dr. Brown, adding that he was present as an "observer"—not an assistant—on both occasions.

Although lay officials of Group Health Association interfered with his duties as medical director, according to Dr. Brown's testimony, he admitted they never projected themselves between staff doctors and their patients.

Dr. Selders, who is no longer identified with G. H. A., was Dr. Brown's successor as medical director.

Relates Difficulties

Leahy asked the witness what authority he was given in connection with administration of the clinic at 1328 I Street Northwest.

"I was to take complete charge," Dr. Brown replied, "but they didn't need a medical director; they needed a rubber stamp."

He testified that Penniman and Zimmerman interfered with his negotiations for admission of G. H. A. doctors to Emergency Hospital. They also instructed him to forward—unopened—to them all G. H. A. mail, even that which was addressed to the medical director, Dr. Brown said.

He declared that he employed Dr. Selders to do minor surgery and clinical work, not major surgery. "He did not have the training to do general surgery. I tried later to supplant him."

The witness testified that G. H. A. physicians were required to accommodate too many patients in a single day.

Tells of Overwork

"An average of 20 to 25 a day is a good, hard day," he explained, adding that on occasions a single staff physician would have to see as many as 60.

Dr. Brown said he advised Dr. Allen Lee and Dr. Mario Scandiffio to resign from the District Medical Society, which they did, only to rescind this action when "someone advised them to withdraw the resignation."

Mrs. Betty Logsdon, secretary to Dr. J. Ogle Warfield, one of the defendants, was brought back to the witness stand yesterday by defense counsel to correct testimony given by her earlier.

The questionnaires which she sent out on instructions of Dr. Warfield were mailed to members of the medical society's hospital committee, she said, and not to the hospitals themselves. Her employer was chairman of the committee.

Induction Set for 428 From D. C.

280 to Be Sworn In April 11-20; 83 Men Named for Ceremony Today

Selective Service headquarters yesterday announced 428 Washington registrants are to be called to the colors in induction increments so far scheduled for April.

Selectees numbering 280 are to be sworn in April 11 through 20, while 148 recruits will go into service April 23. There is also a possibility 200 to 400 colored registrants may be called in a third April increment.

At the same time, selection headquarters made public the names of 83 white and colored men to be inducted today. Of these, 64 are colored registrants, who are part of an increment of 500 colored trainees called this month. Ten white and nine colored replacements for men previously failing induction physical examinations also are to take the oath.

Even should several hundred more trainees to be ordered up from the District in a third April call, the over-all quota for the month will be well under those of recent months. Next month's lighter quota was planned, it was understood, as a "breather" period for the District selection machinery, taxed in finding physically fit men for previous large monthly contingents.

Of the men to go into service today, the white selectees will get duty assignments at Fort Meade, Md., with the Twenty-ninth Division, while the colored trainees will see service at Fort Dix, N. J., it was expected.

Those to be inducted today:

Red, White and Blue For D. C. Auto Tags

Next year's license plates may be red, white and blue containing the District government's shield, it was learned yesterday.

Movie Star Finds D. C. 'Intoxicating'

Maureen O'Sullivan, vivacious Irish screen player, is "intoxicated" with Washington. In fact, she likes the city so much she's coming back in two weeks to "really see things."

Miss O'Sullivan, in private life Mrs. John Farrow, wife of a picture writer, left last night for Detroit, where she is to appear on another Greek war relief program. She spent several days here under sponsorship of Greek relief groups and appeared at a benefit last week.

"Apparently you should know the Greeks to see the world," she laughed last night as she boarded a train for Detroit.

The blue-eyed, dark-haired actress is "sincerely interested in helping the Greek cause" and said her Washington visit was one of the most thrilling events of her life.

She had never been here before and was enthralled with the idea of "actually being in our Nation's Capital."

Yesterday she saw her 10-month-old son, Michael Damien Farrow, off to stay with friends in North Carolina and didn't try to conceal a little sob when explaining she wouldn't see him again until next Monday in New York.

From Detroit, Miss O'Sullivan will go to New York to appear on a radio program with Mayor LaGuardia. Then, she said, she is coming back to Washington to "go places and see things."

Marylander, 63, Critically Hurt By Hit-Run Auto

Emlen Bell, 63, of Woodbridge, Md., was critically injured by a hit-and-run motorist in the 1800 block of Queens Chapel Road Northeast last night.

The injured man, after receiving treatment from a private physician, was removed to Casualty Hospital. He suffered fractures of the collarbone and right arm, and a concussion of the brain.

Police Capture Army Sergeant Who Fled Guard

First Sergt. Harold G. London, who is stationed at Fort Belvoir, Va., went for an afternoon ride yesterday in custody of a buck private and ended in the hands of police at Waterloo, Md.

Private Bernard Naugle, a guard, was assigned the task of taking the sergeant, who is serving time on insubordination charges, for a ride in the sergeant's car.

They drove through Washington. On Bladensburg Road Naugle ordered the car stopped, got out. The sergeant drove on. The private called police.

Cattle Disease Is on the Run, Mohler Says

Reporting progress in bringing bovine brucellosis under control, Dr. John R. Mohler, chief of the Agriculture Department's Bureau of Animal Industry, last night predicted a possibly long but "ultimately successful" campaign.

He delivered the annual Kober Foundation lecture at Georgetown University on "The Conquest of Brucellosis in Animals and Its Relation to Human Welfare."

At the exercises the Rev. David V. McCauley, dean of the School of Medecine, presented him with the Kober certificate and $500 honorarium. The lecture was attended by officials and members of the Medical Society of the District, the group which selected Dr. Mohler for the honor this year. The foundation was endowed in 1923 by the late Dr. George Martin Kober, dean of medicine at Georgetown, to commemorate research work in preventive medicine.

Dr. Mohler pointed out that the term brucellosis refers to all diseases caused by the Brucelli group of micro-organism, from the name of Sir Davis Bruce, who discovered and isolated the first species in 1887. The disease was first traced to raw goat's milk in the Island of Malta and is known as undulant and Malta fever.

In 1927, he said, the U. S. Public Health Service first collected reports of human brucellosis in this country, only 112 cases being reported. By 1937 the number had been increased to 2,497, he said, adding that the number of cases actually occurring is undoubtedly much larger than reported.

During laboratory experiments, "brucellosis has occurred 11 times among the scientists and their helpers in the Bureau of Animal Industry," he said.

During the first year of the bureau's cooperative work, he said, the percentage of cattle reacting to the brucellosis test was 11.5, involving about 40 per cent of the herds tested. By 1940 the percentage had been reduced to 2.5, involving less than 10 per cent of the herds tested.

"We now have 350 counties in which this infection has been brought under control," he said.

Hose Mystery Is Torn Apart By Scientists

An old stocking in the health department laboratory yesterday went "pop" and the whole case of the stocking mystery cracked with it.

One downtown smokestack which had been accused of producing the sulfuric acid during the recent stocking run epidemic received a thorough cleaning last week-end. On Monday the smoke inspection staff hurried atop the building and planted their experimental stocking over the belching smoke. Soon the stocking was as black as soot. It was rushed to the laboratory for examination. No runs, no hits, no errors. Nothing happened. Everyone was pleased. Yesterday the hose was examined again and it looked like a sieve.

At least, as explained by N. E. Young, laboratory technician, "we know the culprit is sulfuric acid." He believes that cleaning of the stacks will prevent repetition of the recent blitzkrieg on the hosiery mart for the following reasons:

"To begin with the fuel contains sulfur. In the process of combustion or oxidation a common gas used in refrigeration, sulfur dioxide, is formed, but due to the presence of moisture this gas dissolves into sulfurous acid which in turn is oxidized into sulfuric acid.

"An examination of the flue deposits (obtained when the stack was cleaned) shows that the acid is present in small droplets, and this is completely surrounded by carbon or soot. This tends to make the droplet buoyant and thus easily blown around on the streets during strong winds. The acid droplet, with its little shield of carbon, blows about the street and attaches itself to the hosiery.

"When the particle of acid strikes the thread of hosiery, which is composed of extremely delicate fibers, the chemical reaction takes place. The time necessary for completion of the reaction depends mainly on the concentration of the acid."

This would tend to explain why in some cases, the hosiery did not develop runs until the wearer was seated at her desk after coming indoors from the street or even the same night when she was home washing her hose and they went to pieces in her hands.

Young said the force of the strong wind broke the little pellet when it hit against the stocking and the hole occurred then and there.

Cleaning of the stack from its accumulation of soot will undoubtedly reduce the chance that the free acid will be carried away with such force as to damage hose.

The test made Monday really is not similar to the actual happening. To begin with, the smoke inspector appeared on the roof of the downtown building and held the stocking near the stack. Girls walking along the street will not have trouble.

Drake Installed As President Of Round Table

Linn C. Drake was installed as president of the Washington Round Table yesterday in ceremonies at the National Press Club. The toastmaster was Raymond E. Rapp, the retiring president. Ceremonies were under the direction of James E. Smith, a former president.

The following officers also were elected: Hugh V. Keiser, first vice president; Alfred L. Taylor, second vice president; George E. Harris, secretary; R. Cralle Lawrenson, treasurer; Edward H. Post, jr., assistant treasurer.

James G. Bowen, Thomas E. Gilbert, Samuel F. Harper, George L. Naramore, Arthur C. Pearson and Norman B. Sheppard were elected directors.

Drake is scout executive for the National Capital Area Council of the Boy Scouts of America. He is instructor of the Vaughan Bible Class at Calvary Baptist Church and is a member of Lebanon Masonic Lodge.

The following committee chairmen were appointed:

Bryan Lord, visitation; George B. Fraser, objective; Arthur A. Pearson, entertainment; Col. Thomas J. Fraley, attendance; R. Cralle Lawrenson, finance; Norman B. Sheppard, program; James G. Bowen, membership; Edward T. Stafford, publicity; Norman M. Blake, scribe; Charles G. Leeck, house; Godfrey L. Munter by-laws, and George T. Warren, biographer.

National Ballet Gives Another 'Friday at Nine'

Washington National Ballet presents "Friday at Nine" in Wardman Park Theater. Program: 'Schubertiani" (music by Schubert), "Capriccio Espagnol" (music by Rimski-Korsakov), "Melodrama" (music by Dorothy Radde Emory), "April Promenade" (music by Johann Strauss 2d), "Quetzalcoatl" (music by Justin Elie). Choreographers: Lisa Gardiner and Mary Day. Pianists: Mary Reynolds, Herbert Herzfeld, Dorothy Radde Emery.

Wardman Park Theater was well filled last evening by patrons of the Washington National Ballet which is closing its third season of "Fridays and Saturdays at 9." A dainty and vernal ballet, choreographed by Mary Day and entitled "Schubertiana" led off the program to a medley of dance melodies by the immortal Franz Peter. This addition to the repertoire has a charmingly romantic atmosphere allied to the color motif of pink in the costumes of the ballerinas, and it will doubtless be repeated next season when the requests come pouring in.

BROWN

Peter Birch, a guest artist with the troupe, danced a pas seul, "Capriccio Espagnol," to Rimski-Korsakov's "Fandango Asturiano" with a furious energy that left the spectators sympathetically breathless. With his technical skill he combined a grotesquerie which gave a dash of humor to his mimetic impersonation.

Dorothy Radde Emery's amusing "Melodrama" was seen again and enjoyed for the satiric qualities of the music as well as the parody of the action. Elison Royce was the heroine, Ray Williams, the hero; Madeleine Lazard, the villainess; Howard Hedges, the villain, and Alice Louise Hunter, the village simpleton.

Lisa Gardiner, who took a small part in the melodrama, emerged once more from her official role as director to mime in "April Promenade," a simpering spinster of the Victorian age. Her comedic gift was deftly used in the affectations of her dance which had the undercurrent of a Strauss waltz.

The program closed with a repetition of "Ceremony to the Sun God," this time called, with a confusion of pagan pantheons, "Quetzalcoatl." The Haitian music of Justin Elie, with its exciting and primitive rhythm, made an excellent basis for the rite of sacrifice, and the Indian costuming was picturesque.

Citizens Ask Law To Teach Shut-ins

The Anacostia Citizens Association last night called for legislation to provide for the education of shut-in children.

Meeting at the Anacostia High School, the association urged that the child invalids be given at least five hours of home instruction a week. Another resolution urged the construction of a public library branch in Anacostia.

Hunter Unit Indorses Overton Plan

Full Committee To Consider Fiscal Formula On Monday

By James D. Secrest
Post Staff Writer

The Overton-Hunter fiscal formula, which would raise the Federal payment to the District from $6,000,000 to approximately $9,300,000, was reported favorably by the Hunter subcommittee yesterday following an uproarious denunciation of a Communist witness.

The measure, already approved by the Senate, will be considered by the full House District Committee on Monday. It will encounter outspoken hostility from some of the members.

Chairman Hunter of the Fiscal Affairs Subcommittee said that the vote was 3 to 1, with Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, who has offered a counter proposal to the Overton land-ratio formula, absent.

Hunter cast the proxy of Representative McGehee (Democrat), of Mississippi, and was supported by Representative Hebert (Democrat), of Louisiana. The negative vote was cast by Representative Bates (Republican), of Massachusetts.

Argument Flares

The Overton formula was all but forgotten at the morning hearing when members of the subcommittee relentlessly grilled Martin Chancey, executive secretary of the Communist Party for the District, as to his party's opinions.

Question upon question were put to Chancey by Representatives Hebert and Russell (Democrat), of Texas, and, occasionally, by Representatives Hunter and Bates.

"If this country doesn't suit you," said Russell, "why don't you move? Why don't you go to Russia?"

Chancey, on the other hand, declared the present war was promoted by munitions workers, that the United States is already in the war, that Earl Browder, convicted former president of the Communist Party, had been "framed," and that the New Deal has deviated from its original objectives toward an imperialistic war.

"If you fellows had it your way," he said," we'd have a Fascist government."

When Hebert suggested that Chancey could not speak his mind so freely in the Soviet Union, the Communist leader retorted:

"If I were in Russia I would not be in disagreement with the Soviet government."

Income Tax Misstep

Members pounced on the discovery that Chancey, who earns $25 a week, has filed neither a Federal nor a District income tax return, although he is single and his earnings exceed the exemptions.

Chancey insisted that he did not know he was liable for the taxes as he sends $10 a week home to his parents.

"I will file a return right away," he added.

The Communist leader disclosed that the party has 450 members in Washington, broken up into 26 branches, and that dues range from 10 to 50 cents a month.

Chancey admitted that the Communists support strikes in defense industries.

"Strikes are not due to workers but to employers," he said. "If the United States would follow its own Wagner Law and stop giving contracts to Ford, there would be no necessity for strikes."

Hebert pointed out that there have been no strikes in the Ford plant.

Chancey, after more than a half hour of testimony on other subjects, finally indorsed the Overton formula. But Chairman Hunter then decided he wasn't so sure he wanted Chancey's support in view of the witness' political views.

"It might harm us," Hunter commented.

The Overton formula was indorsed by William Press, executive secretary of the Board of Trade; Ringgold Hart, of the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association, and Mrs. Earnest W. Howard, of the Federation of Women's Clubs.

Press called the Overton formula "Simple, equitable, certain and satisfactory." Mrs. Howard also indorsed the sales tax.

Teachers Study Defense Problems At Institute

Problems of education and national defense were bases of discussion of the teachers' institute, divisions 10-13, begun yesterday at the Armstrong High School auditorium, with Francis J. Brown, executive secretary of the subcommittee on education, of the War Department, as the principal speaker.

The institute will continue in session throughout today, beginning at 10:40 this morning at Miner Teachers College, with Eugene A. Clark, president of the college, presiding. Harry A. Jaeger, chief of the Occupational Information and Guidance Service, will address the teachers. A panel discussion will follow, with Francis A. Gregory, Mitchell Dreese, George W. Goodman, Walter J. Greenleaf, R. L. Grigsby, Sidney Katz, Ellis O. Knox and Lawrence Oxley as participants.

Nats Beat Phils, 7-6, Extend Streak to 6 Games

Dean Blows Leonard's 7-2 Lead

Rookie Hurler Not Effective; Vernon Stars at First Base; Welaj Hits Homer

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Miami Beach, Fla., March 28.—A staggering triumph over the Philadelphia Phillies swelled the Nats' winning streak in Florida to six straight this afternoon. The Nats won, 7 to 6, but at the finish they were slightly bow-legged under the burden of Jim Dean's pitching. It was not good.

Rookie Dean all but blew the 7 to 2 lead handed over to him by Dutch Leonard in the seventh inning. He pitched four runs back at the Phil's in the last two innings and in the ninth they had the tying run on base before Dean finally saved the ball game by forcing Merrill May to hit a line drive into the glove of Outfielder Johnny Welaj for the last out. It was no pop-up.

The Nats not only won the ball game with a 13-hit attack against two Philly pitchers, but they may have discovered a first baseman. Jimmy Vernon got his first shot at the first base job this afternoon and he was sort of wonderful. All afternoon, Bucky Harris was blinking happily at the plays Vernon was making.

Vernon walloped a fierce two-bagger down the rightfield line and also rammed a long single to right center, but it was his fielding that was the show-stealing effort. He played first base as if it were part of him. He gathered in a pair of wild throws by Buddy Lewis, doing a toe dance on the bag, and he went into the dirt on two other occasions to come up with low throws by Jimmy Bloodworth and Jimmy Pofahl.

Cramer's Arm O. K.

The Nats also discovered, at long last, a centerfielder who could throw—Roger Cramer. Twice, in the early innings, Cramer cut down Philly base runners. He rifled a ball to third base to nip one attempt of a runner to go from first to third on a single, and three innings later when Johnny Rizzo rounded second a half-foot too far, he also was a victim of one of Cramer's clever pegs.

Johnny Welaj, Cecil Travis and Buddy Lewis were the Nats' power boys this afternoon. Welaj thumped a ball over the leftfield wall for a homer, but Travis and Lewis produced the most important blows. They both doubled in the Nats' big fourth inning which produced four runs and clinched the game.

Dutch Leonard had a rough first inning, giving up four hits and a pair of runs. The first man to face him, Shortstop Bob Bragan, lofted a homer over the short leftfield wall. But after that first inning, Leonard was a tough guy to deal with. He allowed only two hits in the next five innings and no runs whatsoever, going farther than any Washington pitcher this spring.

After Bragan had homered on a 3-and-2 pitch in the first inning, Leonard helped the Phil's along by making a wild throw to first on Marty's infield single. Nick Etten's single scored Marty, and Leonard appeared in deep trouble when May followed with a single to center, but when Marty tried to go to third on the blow, Cramer cut him down.

George Case opened the game with a double for the Nats, but it wasn't until the third that the Nats could get a run. Lewis and Travis put that one together with two out. Lewis doubled to deep left, and Travis scored him with a single to left. In the fourth inning they tied the score at 2-2 after Vernon doubled down the right field line. Leonard got him home with a broken-bat single to center. In the fifth, Welaj's homer put the Nats ahead, 3-2. All this was achieved against Bill Crouch, former Nashville right hander.

Nats Get Four Runs

With the arrival of Tom Hughes on the scene in the sixth, the Nats went into mass production of runs. They got four, after two were out. Welaj walked, Lewis doubled to right center, Travis doubled against the score-board in center, Bloodworth's easy grounder was booted by Marnie, Vernon singled to right, and Ferrell drove in the fourth run of the inning with a double to left.

Dean got the pitching job and a 7-2 lead in the seventh. He escaped the seventh inning without damage despite two walks, but gave up a run in the eighth when fine support saved him more trouble. Rizzo singled and Dean filled the bases on walks to Etten and May with none out. Travis grabbed Warren's grounder and started a double play as a run scored. Pofahl went far to his right on Marnie's ball and it was the third out when Vernon came up with a sensational catch of Pofahl's throw.

In the ninth Dean all but pitched the ball game away. He walked, Pinch Hitter Mueller, and pitched a double to Marty. With two out, he also pitched a double to Benjamin, and when Etten followed with a single, the Phils had three runs for the inning and the tying run on first. Happily, Welaj was standing in the proper spot to catch May's line drive that followed.

Redlegs Held To Four Hits, Red Sox Win

Boston Romps Off With 9-2 Decision Over Champions; Foxx Hits Triple

By the Associated Press

Havana, March 28.—The Boston Red Sox rompted to a 9-to-2 exhibition victory over the world champion Cincinnati Reds today with Rookie Earl Johnson and Emerson Dickman holding Cincinnati to four hits.

All of the Reds' blows were against Johnson, who presided for the first six innings.

Boston sewed up the game in the fifth with four runs on a single by Pete Foxx, a triple by Jimmy Foxx, a single by Manager Joe Cronin, a double by Bobby Doerr and a single by Johnson.

Card Teams Win

West Palm Beach, Fla., March 28 (AP).—The divided St. Louis Cardinals enjoyed a field day at the expense of their minor league cousines, the "A" team defeating Rochester here, 6-3, and the "B" squad manhandling Columbus, 18-6, at Hollywood, Fla.

The "B" team started off with 13 runs in the first inning against Columbus, the Cards' American Association farm club, on six hits, including homers by Coaker Triplett and Don Padgett, six walks and three errors. The half inning lasted 38 minutes.

The "A" squad also had one big inning against Rochester, scoring five times in the sixth. Sam Nahem, who pitched the first five innings, held the International Leaguers to two hits.

Cubs Swamp Chisox

Los Angeles, March 28 (AP).—The Chicago Cubs cut loose with a 14-hit barrage today to swamp their cross-town rivals, the White Sox, 11 to 2, in a five-inning game abbreviated by rain.

Claude Passeau, Cub ace, scattered six hits to the Sox and was never in danger of falling behind after the Cubs poured across four runs in the first inning.

Bill Nicholson led the slugging with two home runs. Glen Russell and Lou Novikoff hit for the circuit, the latter also getting a single to drive in a total of four runs.

The Cubs sent two pitchers, Ray Campbell and Louis (Chick) Stefani, to their Tulsa farm club today. Campbell won four and lost six games for Tulsa in 1940. Stefani, Chicago schoolboy, was taken to camp by the Cubs to test his arm which had been bothered by soreness.

Records Fall In Season's Finale Here

1,800 Witness Closing Game at Riverside; Three Marks Are Recorded

By Jack Munhall

Saving their best hockey of the season for the last, the Washington Eagles scattered Eastern Amateur League records to the winds last night as they closed their home season with a 12-3 rout of River Vale before 1,800 goal-groggy fans at Riverside Stadium.

With Norm Burns leading the attack with three goals and an assist and Defenseman Ross Knipfel chipping in a goal and three assists, the Eagles smashed the season league record of nine goals for a game, and also established marks for goals in one period and for four goals in the shortest period of time.

By rapping eight goals through Paul Lessard in the second period Washington established what is believed to be an all-time record, and by counting four times within two minutes of the same session, it accounted for a second all-time mark.

The victory clinched for Washington the hollow title of amateur champions of the United States and extended its string of undefeated games to ten in a row.

The Eagles' score by periods was: 1, 8 and 3, and believe it or not, they had come from behind a 0—1 deficit to win. River Vale fought to the very end despite the futility of it and scored once in the final period to make it a goal a period.

Seven Eagles Score

Seven Eagles split the 12 goals. Hal Dewey, who, with Burns, probably was playing for the last time in a Washington uniform, chalked up a pair of goals. So did Paul Courteau and the amazingly improved Jack MacBeth. Walt Scherer and Burrage made one each.

A fitting close to a great season for Washington hockey fans was this match, interspersed with the brilliance of the Eagles' attack and defense and typically rough Eastern League play. Not to be forgotten in the light of the Eagles' overwhelming triumph was the goal tending of popular Gordie Hemming, who turned in one of his best performances here.

The teams battled, literally, to a 1-to-1 deadlock in the first period, although River Vale outplayed the champions for most of the 20 minutes. Not until the Skeeters were short two men through penalties could Dewey score the goal that enabled Washington to match an earlier one by River Vale's Frank Ranniker.

Speaking of Ranniker, he developed a sore jaw late in the period when Courteau landed three rapid punches on his chin midst a near free-for-all by the Skeeters' goal. Big Portland, the River Vale defenseman, was the center of the trouble and it didn't appear that Ranniker and Courteau felt anything but friendship for each other. Evidently, though, Ranniker said something to Courteau that didn't sound like "friend."

Courteau stripped off his thick

Michigan Tank Team Leading In Title Meet

By the Associated Press

East Lansing, Mich., March 28.—Michigan's swiming pool marvels, seeking a ninth consecutive national Collegiate Athletic Association championship, went out in front tonight in the quest for team honors, but a stubborn Yale Crew kept right on their heels.

With six events included and five rebaining tomorrow, the Wolverines, Western Conference and National A. A. U. indoor champions, stood at the head of the parade with 36 points.

Giving ground grudgingly and piling up unexpected points the Elis had 33, indicating the outcome of the meet might not be decided until the final event.

Behind Michigan and Yale were Wayne and Ohio State, 9 each; Princeton, 6; Minnesota, 5; Williams, 3; Villanova; Springfield and Occidental, 2 each, and Dartmouth, Brown and Stanford, 1 each.

Sleepy Joe Louis Arrives at Camp Late for Training

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, March 28.—Slightly groggy after having lost a bout with the Sandman, Joe Louis arrived late today from Chicago, to begin training for his heavyweight title match with Tony Musto, April 8.

The champion napped most of the way on the train.

Regarding the challenger, Louis said sleepily he had seen Musto fight, and while he would prefer a bigger opponent, he didn't think it made much difference.

"He couldn't fight any closer to the floor than Godoy or Gus Dorazio," the Bomber added.

Hogan Paces Field In Asheville Tourney

Diminutive Golfer Takes 4-Stroke Lead; Putts in Excellent Style

By Bill Boni
Associated Press Sports Writer

Asheville, N. C., March 28.—Ben Hogan didn't play very good golf today but he did put together one of the most incredible rounds of his career and took a four stroke lead in the first round of the $5,000 "Land of the Sky" Open Golf Tournament with a four-under-par 67.

If this should seem a paradoxical statement, consider the fact that batting Benjamin missed four greens to the right or left, was short of another with his second shot, and overshot yet another. That is not the kind of golf which, under average conditions, will make a man's score outstanding.

Putter Is "Hot"

But what Hogan did wrong with his approaches he more than corrected with his putter. On the fast but also bumpy greens of the Biltmore Forest Country Club, Benny got down in one putt ten times, with nine of his one-putters in the last 11 holes and six successive one-putt greens at the end of his round.

"Under the conditions," Benny was frank to admit, "it was the best putting I've ever done." It was more remarkable because he did it with a "second string" putter lent to him two days ago by Willie Goggin. Ben whittled all the lead off it and after today's round offered to buy it from Goggin. Willie promptly made him a present of it.

Lawson Cards 71

Until Hogan came in, one of the last to finish, it looked as if this would be the first P. G. A.-sponsored tourney in years in which par wasn't broken or tied at least once. But in the same threesome with him was Open Champion Lawson Little, who matched par with a 71, and a few minutes later was tied for second place with Sammy Byrd, the former Yankee outfielder.

Ky Laffoon's 72 was good for next place, a shot ahead of Ray Man-

Dorothy Kirby Bows in Finals At Pinehurst

By the United Press

Pinehurst, N. C., March 28.—Mrs. Estelle Lawson Page today defeated young Dorothy Kirby, of Atlanta, Ga., in the finals for the third consecutive year to retain her title in the annual North and South Women's Tournament at Pinehurst Country Club.

Mrs. Page won 5 and 4. She was four up at the turn with a medal score of 39 while Miss Kirby, playing below her best game, held a 44 for the first nine.

Last year Mrs. Page captured the crown by defeating Miss Kirby, 4 and 3, and in 1939 her margin over the Atlanta star was 3 and 2.

The win was Mrs. Page's fifth North and South title. She had won in 1935 and 1937 before her current three-year streak began.

Uncle Sam Flunks Mike Belloise in His Physical Exam

By the Associated Press

New York, March 28.—Mike Belloise, former featherweight boxing champion, was rejected by the Army today when he failed to pass his medical examination.

But before he was turned down, Mike presented a neat problem for the draft board. When the 30-year-old fighter filled in his questionnaire he explained he was single and had no dependents and was placed in Class 1-A. On returning from Baltimore to report for induction, Mike found that his brother, Steve, outstanding middleweight fighter, had been drafted by Gene Tunney to assist in the latter's job of recreational director for the Naval Reserve.

Steve was the chief support of the family. His enlistment gave Mike the task of supporting their parents and six of their ten brothers and sisters. While the draft board was attempting to straighten the matter out, the medical authorities settled it without further argument.

Guldahl Too Slow For Him, 50 Bulla Quits 'Sky' Golf

By the United Press

Asheville, N. C., March 28.—Johnny Bulla, Greensboro, N. C., professional, today withdrew from the Land of the Sky Open Golf Tournament because Ralph Guldahl "plays too slow."

Bulla was playing in a threesome with Guldahl and Ky Laffoon.

At the end of nine holes, Bulla picked up his ball and said:

"I just can't play with Guldahl. He plays too slow. I'll never play with him again.

"Even if I'm leading the field by ten strokes at the end of 36 holes, if they pair me with that guy in the final 36, I'll quit."

Sam Breadon Says Cardinals Just Too Good to Be True

The Red Birds Are 'In' If You Listen to the Jubilant Club Head

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, March 28.—Sam Breadon was home today with the song of the red bird in his heart. To hear the chorus, you'd think it was the victory tune of the pennant-winning St. Louis Cardinals.

"Everything looks fine," warbled the club president on his return from training camp. "It's a great ball club—best we've had in a long time and I believe you'll see something."

How about that infield which Manager Billy Southworth has been switching like a woman selecting an Easter bonnet?

Tough Job for Boss

"It's just a question of getting the best combination," Breadon replied. "They're all good and Billy is having a tough time deciding who'll play what and where. But that'll all be ironed out before the season opens."

And the outfield?

"The outfield? Oh, the outfield!" continued Breadon with crescendo. "The best in either league. Yes sir, I said the best outfield in the business.

"I don't know who's going to play left field, but whoever he is, he'll be a crackerjack. He'll have to be—to win the job away from the other fellow.

"And Walker Cooper as a catcher? Boy, he's really something. He's a great catcher. You know, he doesn't hit high fly balls; he just sends out those low, hard liners."

If you still need more notes before getting in on the Cardinal chorus, continue another stanza with the optimistic impresario:

"All our pitchers are good, too. I wouldn't want Southworth's job of trying to pick which ones to keep. He might make a mistake, you know, because they're all swell."

Johnny, Joe and the Mike:

Pieces of Haight

Washington, D. C.

Dear Boss:

There's something I have tried to avoid in these letters and that is hurting anybody's feelings. I have shaken my own family skeleton so much that every time I go upstairs it sticks its head out the closet door and yells "Uncle!" I have played up the Haight liquor angle until I'm being described in some circles as a human demijohn floundering in an alcohol sea. Somebody wrote in that he heard I used Four Roses instead of cream on my Wheaties and threatened to tell Jack Armstrong.

HAIGHT

Well, as I wrote recently about women wrestlers, it's a helluva way to make a living—I mean this thing of libeling one's self every day as I have been doing. However, it carried me to Florida and back and it beats selling apples or picking up silver paper.

But what I'm trying to get at is that I know a lot of experiences that ring the bell as "Pieces of Haight" material. However, there almost always is somebody involved who might take offense, so I have tried to skip them.

One of these stories is about a very good friend of mine. It isn't exactly on the soft-drink side, so I made up my mind never to use it. However, the hero came in the other night and he suggested it as a subject for one of these letters.

"I'm proud of every drink I ever took," he said. "You write it if you want to."

Well, Boss, this blow has been on the wagon so long now that he couldn't be chased off with an acetylene torch and is one of the busiest and best liked fellows within a paste-pot throw of any newspaper. But despite his insistence that he be identified, I'll stick to first names and go from here.

In the early days of a local radio, Joe conducted a sports broadcast that was unique. He brought anybody and everybody before the mike for interviews on any and every subject. Joe was not the kind who rehearsed. He was strictly an ad lib man. Free speech often carried the program into the rough, but Joe had the ingenuity to get back on the fairway.

One of our copy boys was a star golfer, as well as the winner of an amateur crooning contest. One night Joe stopped in the sports department and said: "Walter, how about asking Johnny to come up next Thursday for the broadcast. We could talk about golf and Johnny could sing a couple of songs."

I agreed to produce Johnny and, in addition, I promised to write the material for the broadcast. Johnny agreed, so early in the week I sat down and wrote the script—questions for Joe and answers for Johnny. I gave John-

PEACE—IT'S WONDERFUL:

Miami, Fla., March 28.—If you didn't know, you could be pardoned for guessing that Father Divine is managing the Cleveland Indians. Visitors to the Indians' training camp where Roger Peckinpaugh is now in command are being shown the results of his peace—it's wonderful program. Nobody is mad at anybody else, it is always carefully pointed out.

POVICH

The Indians have buried the hatchet, and not in each other's heads, Peck says. The bickerings of 1940, when the players didn't like Oscar Vitt and said so, and vice versa, are a dead issue. Cleveland newspapermen report that the Indians are just one big happy family, and will win the pennant. But are they and will they?

There is still some discinclination to accept the reformation of the Indians as a—how do you spell fait accompli? If they are, indeed, just a bunch of little lambkins at this time, there is no great guarantee that it will last. There are too many eruptive personalities on the club. Even Manager Peckinpaugh begins the season under something of a cloud.

If matters go wrong with the Indians at the outset, the same players who said they couldn't play ball for Oscar Vitt last summer may very easily recall that Peck himself is something of a discredited manager. He was fired once by the Cleveland club because he couldn't make them win. And there will always be Owner Alva Bradley, the great arbitrator, who always backs his players against his managers. His office door is always open to players with a squawk, real or fancied, especially if they come in groups.

Peck May Have Discontented Catcher

Vitt's dismissal supposedly satisfied all of the Cleveland players who demanded his scalp and got it, but the story is that one of the Indians is not completely satisfied. Peckinpaugh may have a discontented regular catcher on his hands in Rollie Hemsley. The reformed playboy who discovered he couldn't lick all of the cops in the circuit, sort of wanted Vitt's job for himself, it is understood. Now he finds himself still a man in the ranks.

Bobby Feller, who carried the Cleveland Club on his back last year with his 24 victories, was not entirely innocent in the uprising against Vitt, it seems. Feller has been variously pictured as a lad who was roped into the proceedings against Vitt, or as one who was following the leaders of the revolt, but at least one Cleveland player has confessed that Feller had a part in organizing the committee that called on Bradley with the demand that Vitt be fired.

And the Indians have added nothing in the way of harmony in adding Gerald Walker to the club. Walker leaves little unsaid that is on his mind. If he does not like conditions on the Cleveland Club, Walker will say so, but forthrightly. He won't go skulking into Bradley's office. He'll say it on the field. The Indians had somewhat of an experience with Walker a few weeks after he joined the club this spring. The team was traveling back to Fort Myers by bus after a game against Detroit at Lakeland, and the players, hot and tired, were eager to get home. Walker asked the bus driver to stop at the next ice cream store on the road. The players shouted him down. Whereupon Walker stood up on his feet, called names, and threatened to pull on the emergency brakes himself unless the bus was ordered stopped. They ordered the bus to stop.

Press May Also Be Disgruntled

The happy-family aspect of the Indians this year is supposed to extend even to the camp-following Cleveland press, but if that is so, much has been forgiven. At least one Cleveland writer was mad at the outfit long after Vitt was fired. At a time when the Cleveland press was set against Vitt as a unit, this one writer consented to take Vitt's side and be his public mouthpiece in return for the promise of the exclusive story when Vitt did "resign." The writer kept his end of the bargain faithfully, but when Vitt "resigned," he read about it in a rival afternoon newspaper.

Funny thing about the Indians. The impression somehow has gotten around that the Indians merely have to keep smiling to win the pennant. You'd think that harmony is going to lift them into the championship, without a muscle being moved otherwise. If the Indians simply come out on the field grinning and act like a happy family, the other clubs will lay down their bats and gloves and accept defeat. Nuts.

The only way the Indians are going to win the pennant is to win it by beating out the Yankees or Tigers or Red Sox or any other club that may make it hot for 'em. And with only one .300 hitter in their outfield—and he's 30 pounds over weight—the Indians won't be striking any particular terror in the opposition on the days when Bob Feller isn't pitching. Harmony may work wonders, but it's also helpful if the club can bat home a few runs.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Orlando, Fla., March 28.—Seventy-five-year-old Judge Landis' contract has five more years to run, but already there is a battle on about the naming of his successor. It has been hushed up very well, but our elephant ears picked up a hint of the argument, and subsequent investigation indicates that beneath the placid surface of organized baseball an uprising of some proportions is stirring.

CONSIDINE

It started down here in Florida at the recent joint meeting of the major and minor league officials, the purpose of which meeting was to get the minor leagues to sign another of the long-term promises whereby they agree to remain minor, agree to extend the right of the big league to draft certain minor league stars for the modest price of $7,500, and agree to continue to obey Judge Landis.

Like the last Democratic one at Chicago it was scheduled to be a simple ratification convention. Imagine the surprise of the big league owners when the minor leagues presented a list of amendments to the old agreement. The principal one was that the minors be given a voice in the election of the next czar. As it is now, the minors contribute nothing to Landis' office, and had nothing to say about his being put in there. But for 20 years they have abided by all of his decisions, under a contract known vaguely as the major-minor agreement.

Clark Griffith Gets Suspicious

The American League especially was indignant and the National League finally joined forces with it, to reject and deplore the efforts of the minor leaguers to get a vote in the naming of Landis' successor. This slight hesitation on the National League's part caused an immediate suspicion to fill the breast of Clark Griffith, who gets suspicious of the National League with less effort than you'd believe possible.

Griff soon smelled out a plot (real or imagined) on the part of Sam Breadon and Branch Rickey to inject politics into the naming of the next commissioner. The veteran owner, who is a staunch believer in Landis and Landis' type of czaring, soon had all of his American League associates and a crop of National Leaguers lined up against the enfranchisement hopes of the minors. His most telling argument was that an outfit with as vast a farm system as the Cardinals would, with the help of a few proxies, be able to handpick the next czar—if the minors were given votes—and make of the czar a stooge.

The various amendments submitted by the minors have all been thrown back at them, with a kind of ultimatum to medicate them and to forget especially the nonsense about voting for the new boss. That is where the matter now stands. But the minor league representatives have shown no inclination to back down on the demands. Of course, in the long run the majors will stamp out this uprising.

No Secession Seen Ever

Griffith's shrill cry of politics, plus the fact that major league club owners who see eye to eye with Griff will instruct the minor league clubs they own to have no part of the move to get a vote, will carry the day. It doesn't seem likely that there ever will be a secession, such as was the case when the American League declared itself a major league in 1900 with, ironically enough, Griffith as one of the ring-leaders.

George Washington Nine Loses Opener to Ohio State, 10-1

Colonials Get Good Hurling Until Fourth

McGinnis Cracks After 3 Innings And Buckeyes Open Their Offensive

By Jack Munhall

The sun and the pitching effectiveness of George Washington's Frank McGinnis disappeared at the same time yesterday, and the Colonials opened the local college baseball season by absorbing a 10-1 shellacking from Ohio State's tourists.

McGinnis, to the delight of several hundred fans on the Ellipse, was pitching three-hit shutout ball until the fourth, when a warm spring day became blustery. Whereupon McGinnis, as if the zip had suddenly left his right arm, exploded.

The visitors from the Big Ten hopped on him for three runs in the fourth and started the attack anew in the fifth. McGinnis immediately withdrew in favor of Sophomore "Red" Kloak, who did his first collegiate pitching for Northwestern in 1939. The Buckeyes greeted Kloak like a long-lost Big Ten cousin and extracted three runs from his right-handed slants, while he could retire only one batter.

Amendola Goes In

With one out in the fifth, Kloak gave way to Eddie Amendola, still another right-hander, and he pitched tolerably well until leaving the game for a pinch-hitter in the eighth. Amendola gave up eight hits and three runs in his 3 2-3-inning stint.

Meantime, George Washington was breaking no batting records against a pair of slender Ohio State right-handers. As a matter of fact as late as the beginning of the eighth the Colonials were parties to a no-hitter for Joe Mack and Earl Kendle, the Buckeye hurlers. Mack pitched the first two innings. He sprained his ankle sliding into first after singling in the top half of the third and retired. Kendle picked up and continued to hold the Colonials hitless until the eighth when George Washington made both its hits and its one run.

Len Sokol, former Central High athlete, spoiled the no-hitter when, with one out in the eighth, he batted for catcher Jimmy Dowd and singled cleanly into left. Joe Gallagher picked up Pitcher Amendola's bat and fanned, but little George Oertel brought in the Colonial run with a sharp triple into right.

Ohio State, here for games with George Washington and Maryland today after winning three of four down South, rapped Colonial pitching for 15 solid hits, among them two doubles and three triples.

The Buckeyes also fielded well, tossing two timely double plays into the proceedings. The first, coming in the opening frame, pulled Mack out of a bad spot after he walked two Colonials.

Colonials Have Promise

George Washington, with only four days of outdoors practice behind it, displayed the makings of a good team. The Colonials' fielding was not bad, and their poor hitting seemed more due to their lack of practice than to the Ohio State pitching.

Jessurun Rules Choice Over Cocoa

Andre Jessurun, the hard-hitting Dutch-Jewish fighter, who holds two decisions over Louis (Kid) Cocoa, may enter the ring Monday night at Turner's Arena slight favorite over the New Haven colored star, the experts were prone to think yesterday.

Charlie Rose, the little rotund chap who took over the management of Jessurun eight months ago and saw him whip the 10-1 favorite, Steve Belloise, last January at the Broadway Arena in Gotham's biggest winter upset, says that his fighter has the well known "Indian sign" on Cocoa.

"Andre's slashing, standup style confused Cocoa in their last two fights," Rose was telling Matchmaker Gabe Menendez yesterday. "His toe-to-toe fighting and hammer-like wallops are things Cocoa won't like. This should be the greatest welterweight battle of the season."

Georgie Sacks, here as Cocoa's trainer, said that Jessurun won from Cocoa before the colored boy started his amazing streak that stretched to 46 until Georgie Abrams snapped it at the ball park last summer. And, as Sacks points out, "it took a middleweight to beat him. Cocoa doesn't lose to welterweights. He has to go out of his class because the welters are afraid of him."

Irish Grid Return Not 'Million a Year' —Just $211,915

By the Associated Press

South Bend, Ind., March 28.—The University of Notre Dame broke precedent today and announced its net athletic revenues for the 1940-1941 school year would approximate $211,915.45.

Never before has the university made public its athletic revenue, but the Rev. John J. Cavanaugh, vice prseident and chairman of the faculty board in control of athletics, explained the figures were given out to dispel a popular notion that Notre Dame "makes a million dollars a year" off football.

The estimated net available to the university's general fund is based on gross football receipts of $524,483.75 and budgeted expenses of $312,568.30 for the athletic program for the school year ending in June.

Adair Top-Seeded In 'Y' Tennis

Buddy Adair and Strand Johnsen have been seeded 1 and 2, respectively, in the fourth annual Y. M. C. A. indoor tennis tournament starting today in the men's gym of the "Y," it was announced last night. Starting times for three matches were set, but all others will be played at the convenience of players.

At 10 a. m. C. H. Groff and David Smith will tangle, followed by matches between John Mooris and Ted Pierce at 2 p. m. and between Adair and R. T. Brown at 3. Other pairings bring together James Bowman and D. C. List, Albert Yeatman and T. J. Mahoney, Johnson and Felix Silva, Louis Reznek and the winner of the Morris-Pierce clash.

Ambrose to Head All-Star Sextet

Harold Ambrose, former secretary to Postmaster General Jim Farley and still prominently connected in the Government service, will fly into Washington from the Pacific Coast tonight.

Tomorrow night Ambrose will captain and play a wing for Chet Ambrose's Collegian All-Stars when they meet Georgetown University's icemen in the final game of the 1941 hockey season here.

St. John's Riflemen Defeat Roosevelt

St. John's High rifle team, which has already rung up one of the finest records in its history, closed out its 1941 rivalry with Roosevelt yesterday with a 1,300-to-1,227 victory. It was the fourth triumph the Johnnies have registered over the Riders this year and their tenth in succession. Manager Bob Hayes led the victors with a 270-300 score.

Today the Johnnies face V. P. I. at the local range at 2 p. m.

More than 50 of the city's finest celluloid smackers are expected to be in action today when the 1941 edition of the D. C. table tennis championships start at Chevy Chase Ice Palace at 3 p. m.

Defending champions in men's and women's singles will be Stanley Fields, Ice Palace pro, and Carolyn Wilson. To this year's winners will go an all-expense-paid trip to the national championships in New York April 2, 3 and 4, with the D. C. Table Tennis Association picking up the check.

Though Fields will be favored in the men's division, his title will be seriously threatened by Elias Schuman, the former titlist whom he deposed, and such ranking stars as Lou Gorin, Jimmy Limerick, Jimmy Shea. Miss Wilson's strongest opposition is expected to come from Polly Wotsey and Nancy Cross.

Tickets for the event may be bought at the American Automobile Association and Sport Center as well as at the Ice Palace.

Softball Leaguers To Meet Monday Night

The Metro Night Softball League, which will change its name to the Merchants Night League for play this year, will hold an organization meeting Monday at 1004 Vermont Avenue at 7:30 p. m. Representatives of the following teams are requested to be present: Standard Linen, Kavokas Grill, Senate Beer, I. B. M., Greenbelt, Carr & Boswell, Maryland Sport Club, Navy Yard Apprentices, Dixie Tavern and Lansburgh.

D. C. Amateurs Must Go To Baltimore for Trials

District golfers will go to Baltimore August 14 to sectional qualifying rounds for the National Amateur over the Country Club of Maryland layout—and they can thank their own District Golf Association for that.

The U. S. G. A. announced the site of the trial rounds yesterday over the course known last year as Terra Mariae and before that as Rodgers Forge. They will be played over the usual 36-hole route, with practice rounds on August 12 and 13.

The National Amateur Championship will be played August 25-30 at the Omaha Field Club, Omaha, Nebr. Entries close August 1 at the U. S. G. A. offices in New York.

D. C. Association Demurs

The local simon-pures interested, probably 15, at the most, as the tournament is being held so far West, could have played over one of their own courses, but the District of Columbia Golf Association said "no."

At the annual meeting of the Maryland State body the U. S. G. A. announced both open and amateur qualifying rounds would be played in or near Washington under the direction of the Old Line State body. The parent organization said the District is the central location.

At the District meeting, however, the local committeemen refused their courses unless the District golf body would sponsor at least one of the rounds. So the U. S. G. A. took the open rounds from the Maryland State and awarded them to Columbia, under District supervision, and took the amateur rounds to Baltimore, under the Maryland State.

So now the local amateurs who really want to go to Omaha will have to try at old Rodgers Forge, where they have never been too successful.

The sectional rounds were held at Chevy Chase last year with six places open. This year the places will probably be cut to three or four. Ralph Bogart, Earl Skinker and Billy Shea were the local qualifiers last year, while Sam Bates and Jimmy Watts were successful Virginia qualifiers and Otto Greiner was the lone Baltimorean making the grade.

Blair Smith Named Director Of Recreation Play Area

Appointment of Blair H. Smith, recreational director of athletics and physical education at Gallaudet College, to be resident recreational director for the Rollingwood Play Area and Jesup Park Community Center was announced yesterday by Park Commissioner Lacy Shaw, of Montgomery County, Md.

The appointment created considerable surprise since young Smith has been extremely successful in his endeavors at Gallaudet and was expected to remain there.

Commissioner Shaw said he made the announcement with considerable pride since the appointee's qualifications made securing his services improbable. Smith actually takes a salary cut in his new job but the difference is made up by the living quarters provided in the new field house and by the opportunities for enhancing his already commendable record, Shaw said.

The new director will be charged with developing as well as administering the recreational facilities of the two areas. Rollingwood is the extension of Rock Creek Park into Maryland and includes a horse show grounds as well as the usual recreational facilities.

Hawse Setters Dominate Field In Spring Trials

Setters owned and handled by Virgil P. Hawse, a Staunton, Va., automobile salesman, stole the show yesterday as two stakes of the National Capital Field Trial Club's spring trials were staged at Mount Pleasant Farm near Potomac, Md.

In the puppy stakes, entered by 13 well-matched canines, Hawse took first prize when his Sun Clipper was judged best. Second and third place in the event went to A. K. Frank, of Washington, with Belle of Washington and Frank of Washington, respectively. Both are pointers.

In the all-age stake, Hawse's prize setter, Beau Essig, provided the feature of the day when he captured the trophy for the second straight year. Zero, another setter owned by Hawse, managed for second and third place went to Frank of Woodridge, a pointer owned by V. T. Vermillion, of Washington.

Competition was keen in the puppy stakes, but slightly less than torrid in the all-age event. Bird work in the latter affair was spotty with the exception of the winner's.

Today the annual trials will be wound up with a full day of action in the shooting dog stakes. A total of 26 dogs will compete, starting at 8 a. m., for the Thomas P. Baldwin Trophy.

King, Justice Capture Top Pin Honors

The Brookland Ladies League at Russ Diehl's drives was led by Ruth King and Hilda Justice, both of Willis Esso, who tied for top single with 134. The former rolled a splendid 358 set that was tops for the night, but had to divide honors with Evelyn Sebastian, Gulf Service, who also counted 358 to spark her team to a sweep over Sterling Opticians. Willis Esso took all three from Michigan Park Market with the help of a 561 game and record season set of 1,587. The Brookland Recreation team, however, counted one more pin for team game for honors for the night.

HYATTSVILLE

The Prince Georges County Men's League was once more sparked by its only woman member, Caroline Hiser. Miss Hiser started off with a game of 157, high for the night, and finished with a 413 set, her fourth in the last four league matches, and outrolling such old masters of the game as Perce Wolfe and Harry Hilliard, who are in the same league.

ARCADIA

Mabelle Hering, D. D. W.'s, was the queen last night in the Ladies Independent meet, her 143 game and 379 set being tops for the night and making it possible for her team to total 592 and 1,592 to lead. Miss May, Charles Grill, rolled near highs of 138-362 to spark a three-game win over Galliher & Huguely while Chestnut Farms scored a sweep over Shah & Shah.

NEW RECREATION

Ed Pearson, A. Kahn, was top game man in the Jewelers League, his 150 single topping them all. Al Marggraf, Galt Brothers, was best for the big try with a nice 402, which added one pin to the old record of 401 he rolled several weeks ago. Shah & Shah took team game with 565, while 1,632 won the set for A. Kahn and three straight from Pirrone & Wolter as well.

Chiozza Optioned, Castleman Gets O.K. to Make Deal

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., March 28.—The New York Giants optioned Third Baseman Lou Chiozza to Memphis, of the Southern Association, today and gave Pitcher Clydell Castleman permission to make a deal for himself.

The moves hardly were surprising and in Chiozza's case, at least, not undesirable. Memphis is his home and he is in business there with his father. He was out of action all last season because of a broken leg suffered the year before. He made a game effort to make the big league grade this spring, but was forced out of the picture by Joe Orengo and Mel Ott.

Castleman, whose home is near Nashville, planned to head for Tennessee tomorrow also. He has been bothered by a lame back since winning 15 games as a rookie in 1936. He thinks he has recovered and hopes to make a connection with a major league club—possibly the Chicago Cubs.

Brewers to Play Bruins Tomorrow

Two American Basketball League games, both to be played out of town, remain on the schedule of the Washington Brewers, who are to meet the Washington Bruins in the second game of their District championship series at Turner's Arena tomorrow night at 9 o'clock.

Tonight the Brewers are to invade Philadelphia for a game with the Philadelphia Sphas, while they also have a game remaining with the Kate Smith Celtics to be played in New York by no later than next Wednesday.

Softballers Practice

The B'nai B'rith softball team will hold its first practice of the season tomorrow at 9:30 on the Reservoir Field.

Ft. Myer's Feature Draws 14 Horses

Show Scheduled Tonight and Tomorrow Afternoon; 50 Other Mounts to Perform

Fourteen horses have accepted invitations to participate in the high jumping contest, featured attraction of Fort Myer's Armed Services Horse Show, to be held tonight and tomorrow afternoon in the riding hall of the post.

Those entered in the two phases of the event are Eddie Talbert's Good Friday, Mrs. D. N. Lee's Clover Seed, Mrs. Altemus Whitney's Bon Nuit and First Night, Margaret Cotter's Rocksie, Landon School's Angel Gabriel, Leon Arnold's Way and Cateer, Lieut. Fred Hughes, jr.'s Black Caddy, Mr. and Mrs. Gardner Hallman's Lady Jack, Samuel Bogley's Ringmaster, Howard H. Butz's Hobo and Fritz Kleemann's Comanche and Apple Jack.

Fifty other widely known local mounts are entered in other hunter and jumper events, including Capt. Charles B. McClelland's Smacko, Mrs. N. H. McDowell's Dunstar, Mrs. Ralph Stearley's Stony Ford, Col. Clendenin's Reno, Lieut. Col. Herbert L. Earnest's Silver Moon and Mrs. Lee Counselman's Kristi.

Others are Maj. A. L. Kastner's Reno Jasper, Sherman Flint's Flintlock, Farway Stables' John Walles, Col. and Mrs. Leslie J. McNair's Here's How, John Canney's Dixie Sunrise King, W. T. Crane's Happy Tiger, Maj. Gen. Guy V. Henry's Gabby's Scamp, Mrs. Whitney's Cherry Bounce and Winter Rose, Fred Renn's Hannah, William T. Rinehart's Pal o' Mine, Commander and Mrs. Forrest Sherman's My Lass, and Lisbeth Stieg's Hi-Ho.

Joe Linsie Signed for DeChard Fight

Joe Linsie, young New York heavyweight, has signed to box Jimmy DeChard in a special six-round bout in support of the scheduled ten-round main event bringing together Buddy Baer and Tony Galento at Uline's Arena a week from Tuesday night, April 8.

Linsie, Promoter Alvis emphasizes, is a lad of DeChard's experience and a heavyweight calculated to demand Jimmy's best.

"I have neither overmatched nor have I picked a soft touch for DeChard in his first professional start," Alvis declared late yesterday. "Linsie is a kid with plenty of promise who figures to make DeChard step.

DeChard, former Eastern High School athlete and a former District Golden Gloves and A. A. U. heavyweight champion, has lost but one fight, this a technical knockout to Buddy Moore, in some four years of amateur boxing.

Prior to his departure from New York, Alvis, with the unqualified sanction of Jacobs, had warned both Baer and Galento that they must refrain from taking unnecessary chances in training that might lead to a cut eye or injured head while preparing for this bout.

2 Champions Survive Bouts In NCAA Meet

By the Associated Press

State College, Pa., March 28.—Two of three defending champions advanced to the championship round of the national collegiate boxing tournament tonight in a thrill-packed program of 16 semifinal bouts.

The 1940 champions who moved to within a step of a successful title defense were 120-pound Ted Kara and 165-pound Laune Erickson, of Idaho. The third champion, Johnny Joca, Florida 135-pounder, was eliminated by Gene Rankin, of Wisconsin, who was national champion in 1939, but left his title undefended last year.

Idaho also had a third finalist in 127-pound Frank Kara, a brother of Ted, to share the lead in the fight for unofficial team honors with Southwestern Louisiana Institute of Lafayette, La., which also sent three men into the finals. Wisconsin, Washington State, Penn State and North Carolina qualified two finalists each, while California Aggies and Louisiana State University had one each.

One other pretournament favorite was erased from the running when Herbert Kendrick, giant L. S. U. heavyweight, dropped a close decision to Gates Kimball, of North Carolina.

Only one technical knockout marked the bouts. The single kayo went to Elton Tobiasson, California Aggies' Pacific Coast 145-pound champion, from Nevada City, Calif., who halted Bill Skerpon, of Lock Haven (Pa.) Teachers, after 1:15 of the second round.

Erickson outpunched Fenton Somerville, Virginia's Eastern Association champion, in another slugfest, while Elden Sanders, Southern Conference champion, from North Carolina, registered a minor upset in outboxing heavy-hitting Fred Logsden, of Southwestern Louisiana, in the other 165-pound bout.

Fleetwings Take B. C. Track Meet

Big Hal Adams led the Fleetwings, of Eastern Branch of the Washington Boys Club to an easy victory yesterday in the first junior intra-branch track meet of the season. Adams won the broad jump, high jump and marathon as his mates hung up a 34-point total, beating Indian, which had 25½ points, and Georgetown, which had 21½. Phil Cocimano, of Georgetown, was second in individual scoring.

HIGH JUMP—First, H. Adams (Fleetwings); second, A. Kidwell (Indiana); third, K. Shepherd (Georgetown); fourth, C. Boyer (Indiana).

Sons of Pericles Lose 2d Outing

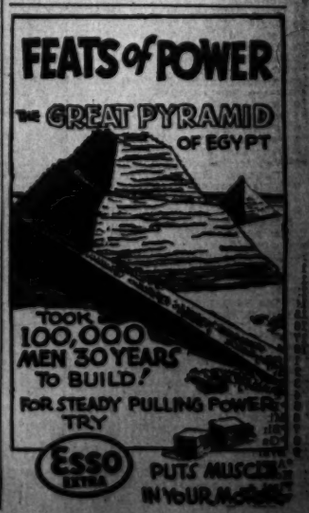
Special Dispatch to The Post

Pittsburgh, March 28.—Washington's Sons of Pericles basketball team opened its endeavor in the national Greek fraternity tournament successfully today, but was eliminated in the quarter-finals.

In the opening round the D. C. five nosed out Chicago's contingent, 35-31, and in turn was nosed out by Philadelphia, 26-24, in the quarter-finals.

Strong Field Enters Table Tennis Meet

With the entry of Mary Grant, stellar paddler, in the Interdepartmental Recreation Council's table tennis tournament for Negro Government employes, a strong field was assured when firing starts Monday for a three-day stand at Banneker Recreation Center. Sponsored by The Washington Post, the tourney will be open to both men and women, and keen competition is anticipated throughout.



Whirlaway Scores at Tropical Over Zacatine, Blue Lily

Calumet's Derby Hope Wins Easily

By the Associated Press

Tropical Park, Fla., March 28.—Whirlaway, second choice in the Kentucky Derby winter odds, was also second choice in the Silver Springs Purse, which featured this afternoon's card at Tropical Park. The Calumet Farm star, with never a look at the odds, fairly raced over a field of sprinters to win going away over a 5½-furlong distance he was not supposed to relish, but which proved to be just his meat.

A photo was needed for second to divide Zacatine and Blue Lily, the favorite, which finished a half length back. Seventh Day ran fourth.

Blue Lily, a "gun" from the barrier, grabbed the early lead, followed by Zacatine and Miss High Hat. Whirlaway was slow to get away and was last of the small field at six. Heading to the turn, the Calumet colt was eating up ground on the rail, then swinging to the outside behind the flying leaders. Into the stretch Blue Lily still held on, with Zacatine challenging. But it was Whirlaway's afternoon. He ripped past Zacatine, and then caught the tiring Blue Lily to be drawing off fast at the finish. Zacatine also nipped Blue Lily in the final strides, with Miss High Hat stopping badly.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ANOPHELES, $16.30, $8.20, $6.30; MORSTEP, $14.50, $10.60; MAHDI, $8.00.

ANOPHELES, on the outside and in close attendance of the leader throughout, responded gamely to punishment through the stretch and outlasted MORSTEP. The latter improved his position on the inside after leaving the backstretch, made a bold effort, but could not get up. MAHDI also came through next to the rail in the final quarter mile and held GALLANT STROKE safe.

FIFTH RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,200. For 3-year-olds. Start good from Puett gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:06. Off at 4:08. Winner, Calumet Farm's ch. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WHIRLAWAY, $7.00, $4.10, $2.80; ZACATINE, $4.20, $2.80; BLUE LILY, $2.60.

WHIRLAWAY, running in his best form, moved into contention on the outside on the stretch turn, closed gamely under vigorous pressure and wore the leaders down in the last 30 yards; ZACATINE kept in close pursuit of the pace from the start, responded courageously when the final test came and outlasted BLUE LILY. The latter set a rapid pace in the early running, but then faltered when it came to a drive.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds; claiming. Start good from Puett gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:31. Off at 4:32. Winner, Mrs. T. Two-dollar mutuels apid—BIG BRANDS SON, $12.90, $7.50, $4.60; MIGHTILY, $8.70, $6.60; FELSUN, $6.10.

BIG BRANDS SON, reserved off the pace until straightened into the stretch, closed gamely under punishment and wore the leader down in the last strides. MIGHTILY, rated in front in the early stages, held on stubbornly when challenged, but could not stave off the winner's bid. FELSUN, vigorously ridden the entire trip, outlasted ENTRE NOUS in the final drive.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good from Puett gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:32. Off at 5:32. Winner, Medway Stable's ch. f. (4), by Khassan—Repression. Trained by L. Woodstock. Value to winner, $700; second, $180; third, $90; fourth, $30. Time, 1:52⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—KORACAN, $42.60, $23.80, $13.00; DAY IS DONE, $12.00, $6.60; PETIT JEAN, $6.20.

KORACAN, under restraint until midway around the last turn, moved up fast when called upon and outlasted his opposition when the final test came. DAY IS DONE, slow to get going, made up much ground while circling the field in the final half mile. PETIT JEAN faltered through the stretch after showing early speed.

Selections at Tropical Park

Dear Al:

Red-haired Dave Womeldorf, a native of West Virginia, who, as conditioner of Mrs. Emil Denemark's stable, topped America's list of winning trainers last year with 108 victories, has brought a well-balanced string to Bowie. With Womeldorf on the scene, America's three leading winning trainers of 1940 are ready to do battle during the 11-day session April 1 to April 12. The others were Hirsch Jacobs, of New York, with 98 victories, and Harry Guy Bedwell, of Savage, Md., with 83 winners. That Womeldorf is determined to be the meeting's leading winning trainer is shown by his nominating four horses for the $5,000 Rowe Memorial, which is down for a decision Wednesday. They are Prairie Dog, War Minstrel, Court Dance and Equistar. Mrs. Denemark has enjoyed enviable success the past five years. Her thoroughbreds during that time won 433 races and earned $588,021 for the Chicago sportswoman. General Manager Joseph A. Farrell, who inspected the plant yesterday with Superintendent Dick Pending, says that every stall will have an occupant by Monday. Horses are still arriving daily from California, Florida and Arkansas, while others are shipping in from Eastern private tracks. The demand for space far exceeds the supply, therefore many horsemen will have to stable at Laurel and Pimlico and van here on days they are slated to race. J. P. (Dapper Sammy) Smith, who stopped off here en route to New York with Victor Emanuel's horses, will, in addition to Leisure, candidate for the $2,500 Bowie Kindergarten on April 5, campaign Oldwick, another Kindergarten candidate, for James Cox Brady; Tropic Lady, Highlander and Omission. The last named is a candidate for the $5,000 Rowe Memorial on Wednesday. Race Secretary John Banks Campbell, who, with Assistant Secretary Francis Dunne, is busy getting things shipshape for Tuesday's opening, says he looks for the following field to fight it out in the $5,000 Rowe Memorial: Clyde Tolson, Good Turn, Honey Cloud, Omission, Catapault, Maechance, Watercracker, Equistar, War Minstrel and Prairie Dog.

BILL.

First race—SHE KNOWS, with Meade up, gets in this with modest weight and I'm going to string along. Needs only the right ride. JOHNNY Q. fits nicely in this sprint and should be a keen factor. EBONY FLY, with McCreary in the saddle, belongs close.

Second race—HALLIE gets in company that seems to suit his purposes in this field. The weight of 108 pounds is right and I look forward to a strong effort. BLIND BARNEY has shown enough to be due respect in this company. ATTRACTING for the show end.

Third race—FETTACAIRN is the class of this group. Appears capable of handling the 116-pound assignment and I see no reason for mistakes. ROSE ANITA could be a keen factor with these. IN QUESTION will be right there if taken off the reserve list.

Fourth race—FADE looks like the right one in this field. Packs plenty of punch and will have Arcaro aboard. KIND GESTURE is a good juvenile and will not be far from the front at pay-off time. SMALL TIME to account for the minor money.

Fifth race—Despite the crushing assignment of 122 pounds, I'm going back to DOUBT NOT in this company. Goes coupled with DONNA LEONA, a lightly weighted stablemate. POTRANCO gets the rail position and will be a keen factor. KINGS BLUE won his last.

Sixth race—TRIMLY gets my call in this open field of distance artists. Likes the route and has worked well. TOPEE belongs close with these. SANDY BOOT has regained best form lately and will be a factor.

Seventh race—GREY DOLL is tossed in this with 97 pounds and should take it all. SICKLEBILL is a good campaigner and will take it all if the top one stops. WEARY FLOWER to take care of the others.

Eighth race—SAY JUDGE and REDROCK CANYON should battle it out for first money in this group. Both are fit and I prefer them in the order named. SOLDIERS CALL for the third money.

Best bet—FETTACAIRN.

D. C. Utilities Report Gains In Month's Net

Net income of the Capital Transit Co. was $63,139 in February as compared with $21,515 in the same month last year, or an increase of 193.5 per cent. Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. reported February net income of $168,310 which was $7,274 more than in the same 1940 month.

The Potomac Electric Power Co. reported February net income of $410,055, against $342,783 in the same month of 1940. This was an increase of 19.6 per cent.

Last month's operating revenues of the local transit firm totaled $1,106,795 as compared with 977,564 last year. Operating expenses were $757,091, against 707,812 in February, 1940. Provision for depreciation was $120,309, against 112,298 last year, the increase being attributed to the new street cars and buses put in service. Interest charges were $60,632 as compared with $63,180 in the same 1940 month. Taxes totaled 106,607, against $73,575 a year ago.

There were 15,952,929 revenue passengers during the month, an increase of 12.6 per cent over the 14,162,041 carried in February, 1940.

The telephone firm reported February operating revenues totaled $1,175,882, against $1,601,756 a year ago. Operating expenses were $818,964 as compared with $743,206 in February, 1940. Taxes in the latest month totaled $123,755, an increase of $13,809 over a year ago.

There were 281,887 telephones in service at the end of February, an increase of 3,554 telephones over the previous month. Users made 32,482,000 calls during the month, or 1,936,000 more than in February, 1940.

Pepco's operating revenues for the month totaled $1,472,082, a jump of $107,508 or 7.8 per cent. Operating deductions for expenses took $920,025, leaving net revenues from operations of $552,057, an increase of 21 per cent.

Cumulative results of the utilities for the first two months indicate new high records for this year. Capital Transit's net income in January and February was $131,496, against $28,196 in the same period of 1940, or a spectacular gain of 366.4 per cent.

For the same period C. & P. Telephone netted $337,398, against $326,114 in the corresponding two months of 1940.

Pepco's net income for the first two months totaled $804,682, compared with $733,363 in the like 1940 period. This was an increase of 9.7 per cent.

Will Spend $1,750,000

Expenditures amounting to approximately $1,750,000 for the construction of telephone plant and installation of equipment in the District of Columbia have been authorized by directors of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., according to Charles A. Robinson, vice president and general manager.

The major portion of the amount authorized, over $1,128,000, will be spent for installing, disconnecting and moving telephone facilities on subscribers' premises during the second quarter of 1941.

Approximately $391,000 will be spent to install private branch exchanges and associated equipment for several of the company's large subscribers who are experiencing rapid growth in personnel due to the national defense program.

The provision of additional cable facilities in several sections of the city requires the expenditures of $129,800. More than $66,000 of this amount will be spent to place cable in the city to provide additional lines from the District to central offices in Alexandria and Arlington and furnishing subscriber facilities for the National Airport and the South Washington, Va., area.

RFC Reports Another Profit in State Bonds

By the Associated Press

Jesse Jones, Federal loan administrator, announced yesterday sale by the RFC to Halsey, Stuart & Co. of an additional $27,804,557.29 par value State of Arkansas highway refunding bonds at 102.5 and accrued interest, a premium to the RFC of $695,114.

The bonds, part of an issue of $136,330,55.29 recently purchased by the RFC, are the balance, Jones said, of $90,804,557.29 to be taken up by the corporation on April 1, of which $63,000,000 previously was sold at a premium of $850,000.

Latin-American Phone Calls Rise Sharply

New York, March 28 (AP).—The International Telephone & Telegraph Co.'s operating subsidiaries handled more than twice as many telephone calls last year between the United Sates, Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Peru and Uruguay as in 1939. The trend thus far in 1941 has continued upward.

Radio and cable companies' traffic between the Americas likewise improved substantially and still is rising.

Raw Silk Stocks Low

New York, March 28 (AP).—Textile circles reported today raw silk supplies in the United States had dwindled to the lowest level in recent years, probably to the vicinity of 40,000 bales. Current consumption was said to be around 30,000 bales monthly.

Grains Jump On Prospect of Loan Rate Rise

By the Associated Press

Chicago, March 28.—Enlarged investment and commercial buying lifted wheat and corn prices to new highs for the season today and to the best general level since last May, when many commodity values collapsed with the German westward invasion.

Wheat rose as much as 2½ cents a bushel and corn as much as 1⅝ at the peak of the buying movement. May wheat touched 90⅝ highest in ten months for any contract, except for the 90¾ top touched by December futures. In the spot market best grades of wheat sold as high as 95½ while corn was around 70 cents.

Buying was inspired by progress of legislation in Congress calling for increased basic loan rates, the critical situation in the Balkans and strength of other commodities.

Despite heavy profit taking in late dealings, due to weakness of securities and prospects of increased loan wheat redemptions, wheat closed 1¼-1⅝ higher than yesterday, May, 90-89⅞; July, 88-87⅞. Corn was ⅞-1⅛ up; May, 66⅝-66¾; July, 66⅞-67. Oats, ¼-⅜ higher. Soybeans, 1⅛-1½ higher. Rye, ⅛-⅞ up and lard 12-15 higher.

Legislative developments included House committee approval of a bill calling for loans approximating 85 cents a bushel on wheat, compared with 64 cents last season. Senate passage of a measure increasing marketing quota penalties Senate Appropriations Committee approved a record-breaking farm aid bill.

Lard registered gains of as much as 20 cents per hundred weight at one stage to new peaks since September, 1939, with demand reflecting the oil and fat situation. Government purchases of 25,000,000 pounds were reported on top of 11,500,000 pounds taken several days ago and some traders expressed belief all or part of this may be shipped to meet British requirements made known earlier this month.

Later Easter Fails to Drop Local Sales

Washington department store sales in the week ended March 22 held even with the corresponding week last year despite the fact that Easter will come much later this year than it did in 1940. However, the later holiday period affected retail trade in other cities.

The Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported yesterday that retail sales in the Fifth Reserve District during the latest week were 3 per cent below the level of last year. Stores in Baltimore reported a 4 per cent decrease during the week.

In the four weeks ended March 22, Washington sales were 7 per cent above the corresponding period in 1940.

Nationally, the Federal Reserve Board estimated department store sales in the week ended March 22 were 2 per cent less than in the corresponding week last year.

In the week ended March 15 sales had been 1 per cent above last year. In the four weeks ended March 22, sales were even with the similar period last year.

By Federal Reserve districts, comparisons of the week ended March 22 and the corresponding week last year were:

Increases—Chicago, 5, and St. Louis, 6 per cent.

Decreases—Boston, 6; New York, 5; Philadelphia, 6; Cleveland, 2; Atlanta, 2; Kansas City, 8; Dallas, 7, and San Francisco, 1 per cent.

Ward's Reports Slight Increase In Auto Output

Detroit, March 28 (AP).—Ward's Automotive Reports noted a slight increase in motor vehicle production in its weekly survey today, placing the week's output at 124,165 cars and trucks. Last week's assemblies numbered 123,805. A year ago this week 103,370 units were completed.

Ward's said the volume of production would be turned downward if the strike in the Midland Steel Products Co. plants continues. It already has resulted in the closing of the Ford Lincoln division.

Nash Sales Increase

Detroit, March 28 (AP).—Nash Motors division of Nash-Kelvinator Corporation today reported its new-car sales for the first 20 days of March numbered 4,331, compared with 3,471 in the comparable period a year ago. Sales from January 1 to March 20 were announced as 20,002 units. For the same period a year ago they numberer 10,711.

Panama Bond Issue Is Offered

New York, March 28 (AP).—Public offering was made today of $4,000,000 Republic of Panama 3½ per cent external refunding bonds.

Field, Glore & Co. headed the offering syndicate. Proceeds will be used to retire the republic's outstanding 5½ per cent bonds.

The country's debt readjustment plan, of which this offering is a part, also provides for an exchange for $11,313,500 of 5 per cent bonds for a like amount of 3¼s and for payment of interest arrears on the 5s at the rate of 4 per cent to November 15, 1939.

RFC Bonds Due, Rail Seeks Postponement

The Southern Pacific Co. asked Interstate Commerce Commission approval yesterday of its petition to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for postponement of the maturity date of $13,000,000 of the $18,000,000 it owes the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

The company said it proposes to pay half the $10,000,000 due next May 1. An additional $8,000,000 is due a year hence. The company proposed consolidating the two loans into one and making the maturing date May 1, 1945. Interest would remain at 4 per cent.

Boston Wool

Boston, March 28 (AP). (U. S. Dept. of Agr.).—Actual trading in domestic wools was slow in Boston today. A few inquiries were being received for fine territory wool, but the business was restricted by the lack of offerings for immediate delivery. Forward buying was quiet. Very little interest was shown in fleece wools. Scattered sales were reported on the finer grades of foreign wools.

Extent of Foreign Money Flow To U. S. Revealed by Treasury

By the Associated Press

The Treasury, disclosing some details of the huge movement of foreign money to the United States for safekeeping during 1940, said yesterday that foreign short-term banking accounts rose $721,627,000 to a total of $3,778,655,000.

France boosted its balances by $201,868,000, placing most of this extra cash here in June, about the time it was surrendering to Germany. Switzerland increased its deposits $132,037,000. Scandinavian and Balkan countries jumped theirs $133,678,000.

Purchases of war materials reduced United Kingdom deposits by $32,753,000. Because of fears that the United States might "freeze" their funds, Germany withdrew $2,769,000 and Italy $20,396,000 from their known bank accounts.

Canada added $139,662,000 to its deposits, Latin America added $11,298,000 and Asia $118,979,000.

Due primarily to British and Canadian sales, foreigners reduced their holdings in American securities by $140,968,000 during the year. In addition, foreigners bought back $78,459,000 of foreign securities which had been held by Americans.

At the same time, many Americans were bringing home funds they had in foreign countries. These withdrawals from foreign countries amounted to $124,724,000 and were made from all parts of the globe, except Latin America, where outstanding American funds increased $9,400,000.

After balancing the various types of international transactions, the Treasury said the net capital inflow into the United States during 1940 was $804,200,000. This sum was about $300,000,000 less than the preceding year, but was still one of the largest in history.

Stock List Backslides in Light Turnover; Motors Under Pressure on Fear of Strikes

New York, March 28.—The stock market today gave up all of its rallying advantage of the preceding session without any particularly adverse news to account for the backslide.

Slightly lower tendencies developed in the list after an early attempt to extend Thursday's upturn met with half-hearted response. Motors and steels weakened in the third hour and closing recessions ranged from fractions to nearly 2 points. There were a few wider dips.

The one encouraging straw in the retreat was the slackening of volume. Transfers totaled 442,610 shares, against 551,190 the day before. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was off .2 of a point at 41.4, thus eliminating yesterday's advance of this composite.

Some of the day's selling was attributed to fears the defiance of the Nazis by Yugoslavia might result in retaliatory measures which would be unsettling marketwise. Expectations the Washington Government would take a firmer stand in labor disputes still were bolstering to sentiment but it was noted that while one Bethlehem steel strike was adjusted there was a walk-out at another of the company's important plants.

Motors were timid throughout. While this week's automotive production was up slightly over the previous week, there were warnings that a drop in output was likely if factories were crippled through shortage of materials from strike-bound accessory concerns.

Rails, generally, again were buoyed by the brightening traffic outlook. Aside from Union Pacific, which unaccountably fell to a new year's low, most held declines to minor amounts.

Chrysler was another leader to reach new low ground for 1941.

Prominent shares on the reversal included United States Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Douglas Aircraft, American Telephone, Anaconda, American Can, General Electric, Du Pont, Philip Morris, United States Rubber, Consolidated Edison, Pere Marquette prior preferred and Montgomery Ward.

Universal Pictures preferred got up 3 on a few transactions. Paramount Pictures was up ⅛ after posting a new top for the year. Others emerging with modest improvement were Loft, Westinghouse, International Harvester and Texas Corporation.

Agricultural commodities bounded upward as Congressional committees took steps to boost farm appropriations. Wheat at Chicago advanced ⅛ to 1⅞ cents a bushel and corn gained ⅞ to 1⅛. Cotton eased from its best levels but finished up 75 to 85 cents a bale. Rail bonds were resistant but other loans inclined to back away.

In a spotty Curb plus signs were retained by Electric Bond & Share, American Cyanamid "B," McWilliams Dredging, Niagara Hudson Power and Pantepec. On the losing end were Aluminum of America, Humble Oil, Creole Petroleum, Bell Aircraft and Republic Aviation. The turnover here was around 94,000 shares versus 110,000 Thursday.

Cash Plentiful, Pullman Decides To Retire Shares

New York, March 28 (AP).—Pullman, Inc., management has decided to use up to $15,000,000 of the company's surplus cash in the retirement of an unspecified number of outstanding shares, it was announced today.

The company pointed out in a notice to stockholders that it has an excess of current assets over current liabilities of $75,875,000 "which gives the Pullman group of companies a larger amount of working capital than it has had at any time" since 1927, when Pullman, Inc., was formed as a holding company.

Stockholders were invited to tender their shares and name the selling prices. Acceptances by the company will be announced around April 15.

ICC Authorizes Rail Bond Issue

By the Associated Press

The Interstate Commerce Commission authorized the Philadelphia & Reading Terminal Railroad Co. yesterday to issue $8,000,000 in first mortgage bonds, $3,500,000 to be serial bonds and $4,500,000 to be sinking fund bonds.

The serial bonds are to be sold at 99⅛ and the sinking fund bonds at 97¼ per cent of par, with accrued interest in each case. Proceeds will be applied to the retirement of $8,500,000 of Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Co. terminal loan 5 per cent bonds, due May 1, 1941.

Merck Stockholders Vote 3-for-1 Split

Rahway, N. J., March 28 (AP).—Stockholders of Merck & Co. today authorized a three-for-one split in common stock, bringing the total to 900,000 shares, and approved issuance of 300,000 additional common shares to expand working capital.

Directors of the chemical and drug firm said recently they contemplated sale of not more than 100,000 of the 300,000 new shares in the near future.

The stockholders also voted for an upward revision of the company's pension plan.

Foreign Exchange

New York, March 28 (AP).—The Canadian dollar dropped .06¼ of a cent in relationship to the United States dollar in "free" foreign exchange trading today, declining to a price of 87.87½ United States cents.

The Hongkong and Shanghai dollars gained slightly. All other leading world currencies closed unchanged from yesterday's final quotations.

London Stocks

London, March 28 (AP).—The securities market advanced on all fronts today in response to the independent attitude Yugoslavia has taken toward Axis demands.

British government bonds scored gains running to around ½ point and finished at the session's peak prices. Greek bonds rose as much as 2 points and Portuguese loans also attracted favor.

The upward trend among industrial stock leaders spread to normally slow-moving secondary issues. Fresh provincial buying buoyed domestic rails, especially junior apparitions.

Cotton Use Soars; Defense Orders Are Minor Factor

Boston, March 28 (AP).—Domestic cotton consumption is at the highest level in the Nation's history and defense orders accounts for only between 5 and 10 per cent of total buyin, Charles K. Everett, director of merchandising of the Cotton Textile Institute, told the Boston Retail Trade Board and the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers today.

Recalling that five years ago "many were resigned to an annual domestic consumption of 6,000,000 bales or less," Everett said that consumption during the 1940-41 crop year apparently will exceed 9,000,000 bales "and mills today actually are operating at the rate of 10,000,000-bale-a-year consumption."

New Security Issues Decline in Week

New York, March 28 (AP).—Public offerings of new security issues declined during the week ended yesterday, totaling $57,747,500 compared with $96,863,621 the previous week, Standard & Poor's Corporation reported today.

The drop in activity was caused by a decline in municipal offerings. New corporate issues attained the largest volume in seven weeks but very little new capital was included in the total.

Cotton Futures

New York, March 28 (AP).—A bullish interpretation of Washington legislative developments sent cotton futures rushing past the 11-cent a pound market today to the season's highest levels.

The market closed 15 to 17 points higher after last-minute hedging cut into earlier gains of as much as 30 points.

Two main factors were behind the buying: (1) The House Agricultural Committee adopted an amendment to increase Government loans on wheat and cotton to 75 per cent from 56 per cent of theoretical parity. (2) The Senate Appropriation Committee approved an amendment to raise parity payment funds to $450,000,000 from the $212,000,000 previously voted.

Worth Street textile dealers reported quiet conditions but prices held at the peak of the current swing ahead.

Cottonseed Oil

New York, March 28 (AP).—Cottonseed oil futures sold at the highest prices in two and one-half years today and maintained final gains of 2 to 5 points despite a late setback.

Turnover amounted to 409 contracts: May, 8.17 bid; July, 8.19; September, 8.30 bid; October, 8.33 bid.

Crude oil hold in the Southwest at 7¼ cents a pound and valley grades were in demand at 7 cents. Texas crude moved at 7 cents.

Crude soybean oil traded at 6⅞ cents a pound, basis Decatur, Ill., up ⅛ cent and a new high for the crop. Higher prices also were posted for crude palm and cocoanut oils.

New Orleans Cotton

New Orleans, March 28 (AP).—Cotton futures gained slightly over $1.50 a bale here today before profit-taking halted the advance. Closing prices were steady, 17 to 18 points net higher.

Personal Loans Of Banks Show Big Expansion

By the Associated Press

Preston Delano, Comptroller of the Currency, said yesterday more than 88 per cent of national banks in the United States and its possessions were making personal and retail installment loans to customers.

He reported a survey at the beginning of the year showed that national banks had $819,535,000 investments in such loans. This amount was equal to 12 per cent of total loans to customers, but the total loans figure did not include loans on real estate or for the financing of securities transactions.

Of the retail installment paper held by the banks, $161,028,000 was invested in FHA improvement loans. Personal loans to individuals amounted to $204,367,000.

The proportions of their funds invested in such loans, Delano added, was highest in the Pacific States and lowest in New England and the South.

Insurance Firms' Bond Buying Role Stressed at Parley

New York, March 28 (AP).—Life insurance companies will contribute to defense by buying still more than the $5,500,000,000 in Government bonds they now own, speakers told more than 1,000 insurance sales executives attending the annual sales conference of the Life Underwriters Association today.

Paul F. Clark, vice president of the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co., recalled that before 1917, insurance companies held virtually no Government securities. At the end of the war more than 10 per cent of their assets were invested in Federal issues.

Clark said that the 65,000,000 holders of policies were investing in defense, through the companies, in greater sums than ever before.

Sulphur Demand Sets New Record

New York, March 28 (AP).—Domestic consumers required more sulphur in 1940 than in any other year in the history of the American sulphur industry, Langbourne M. Williams, jr., president of Freeport Sulphur Co., said today in his annual report.

The industry supplied domestic consumers a total of 1,795,000 tons and in addition, Williams said, exported 760,000 tons.

Demand for sulphuric acid, principal commodity made from sulphur, reached new highs in the steel, chemical, paint, rayon and film industries, Williams said.

As previously reported, the Freeport company earned $3.81 a share on its common stock in 1940, compared with $2.76 in 1939.

Truck Tire Makers Drop Paper Wrapping

New York, March 28 (AP).—As part of defense conservation of industrial materials, useful savings in heavy paper will be achieved through elimination of wrapping from truck tires, the Rubber Manufacturers Association said today.

Several manufacturers, the association reported, have stopped wrapping all truck tires and other companies have done so partly or considered falling in line soon.

"The national defense program has given a real impetus to industry efforts to simplify production and distribution all along the line," the association commented.

Warm Weather Gives Fillip to Retail Trade

New Yok, March 28 (AP).—Warm, sunny weather sent shoppers swarming into stores this week and retail sales averaged 9 to 16 per cent above last year for the country as a whole, Dun & Broadstreet reported today.

After the preceding week's snow and cold, moderating temperatures acted as a spring tonic on store business, and apparel buying for approaching Easter gave brisk staple trade an additional fillip.

Home furnishings sales ran 15 to 25 per cent above last year, groceries 10 per cent, and automobile sales 25 per cent.

Msgr. Shehan Is Made Rector Of St. Patrick's

The Very Rev. Msgr. Lawrence J. Shehan, archdiocesan director of Catholic Charities, has been appointed rector of St. Patrick's Church, Tenth and G Streets Northwest, Archbishop Michael J. Curley announced yesterday.

Msgr. Shehan

Msgr. Shehan, who has been affiliated with St. Patrick's since his ordination 18 years ago, has been parish administrator since the death on February 11 of the Right Rev. Msgr. Cornelius F. Thomas, rector.

The priest's interest in the problems of the poor brought him appointment in 1929 as assistant director of Catholic Charities. He became director four years ago. For the present he will continue this Work, it was said.

A native of Baltimore educated in Catholic schools there, Msgr. Shehan was ordained at the North American College in Rome in 1922.

He is a member of the American Association of Social Workers, vice president of the board of trustees of St. Vincent's Home and School, and member of the board of trustees of the Community Chest.

His appointment as rector of St. Patrick's also makes him ecclesiastical superior in charge of religious communities of women within the archdiocese of Washington.

City First-Aid Stations Urged By Ruhland

Establishment of city-wide first-aid stations and mobile treatment service to meet "emergencies" was recommended yesterday by Health Officer George C. Ruhland, in his first report to the District Defense Council.

Inadequacy of the city's hospital facilities, even under normal conditions, were criticized by the health officer, in recommending that additional housing facilities be obtained that could serve hospital purposes.

To date, Dr. Ruhland said he has found approximately 135,850 square feet of space which could accommodate an additional 2,515 beds. Exclusive of the Federal hospitals such as Walter Reed, Mount Alto, United States Soldiers' Home, United States Naval Hospital and the hospital at Fort Belvoir, there are at present available for general civilian use a total of 4,163 beds distributed over 13 private hospitals, Freedmen's Hospital and Gallinger, he said.

Dr. Ruhland is chairman of the committee on health of the council. In speaking of the inadequate facilities, he said.

"It is appreciated that under the circumstances of severe epidemics or under conditions of total war the existing bed facilities would prove inadequate."

In a general way, he said, the present planning assumes that the existing hospital facilities be used mainly for surgical cases requiring the highest degree of equipment and operating-room facilities, and that the visualized auxiliary beds be utilized for the less acutely ill, for convalescents and chronics.

Dr. Ruhland proposes to zone the city into regions each to have a panel of physicians, nurses, dentists, ambulances, stretcher bearers, nurses' aides, orderlies and other personnel required for emergency work. The establishment of this service will require volunteers, Dr. Ruhland stated.

Robert S. Parker, Banker, Dies

Atlanta, March 28 (AP).—Robert S. Parker, 56, president of the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta, died early today after an illness of five weeks.

A native of Dalton, Ga., he became counsel for the bank in 1914, vice president in 1936, and was elevated to the presidency two years ago.

Parker was graduated from Emory University, Atlanta, in 1905 and the University of Georgia Law School in 1907.

Cochrane, Calendar Executive, Dies

Red Oak, Iowa, March 28 (AP).—William Cochrane, 73, Red Oak, president of Thomas D. Murphy Co., one of the country's largest art calendar companies, died last night in Los Angeles, Calif., where he was spending the winter, relatives here were notified today.

A director of the Employers Mutual Casualty Co., and vice president of the American Colortype Co., Cochrane was past president of Iowa Manufacturers Association and the National Advertising Specialty Association.

Edward Wall, 68, Retired Policeman, Dies in Florida

Edward V. Wall, 68, who had served with the Metropolitan Police Department 42 years until he retired several years ago, died last night in St. Petersburg, Fla., where he was spending the winter.

Mr. Wall received numerous commendations, among them one for capturing a man who had attacked a woman and another for the rescue of a man and woman from a burning building before the arrival of the Fire Department.

A native of Washington, he made his home at 1624 Roxana Road Northwest. The funeral will be held at 9 a. m. Monday at Nativity Church, with burial in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

He is survived by a son, Frank E. Wall; two daughters, Mrs. Thomas Culhane and Mrs. Adam Arney; two sisters, Miss Ella N. Wall and Mrs. Katherine Freeman, all of Washington.

Miss Mary Hayden Wins in Legion Oratorical Contest

Miss Mary M. Hayden, of 112 East Bradley Lane, Chevy Chase, Md., last night won the right to compete in the District finals of a national junior oratorical contest sponsored by the American Legion.

Miss Hayden, Holy Cross Academy student, won top honors for parochial school students in a debate at the American Legion's local headquarters, 1608 K Street Northwest. She spoke on the topic, "The Constitution, a Guarantee of Human Rights."

Others speaking were Miss Elizabeth Repetti, of 2107 K Street Northwest, representing Notre Dame Academy, and John E. Lynch, 2444 Twentieth Street Northwest, of St. John's College. The local finals, with Miss Hayden and students from public and private schools competing, will be at the Museum of National History auditorium April 4.

Wheeler to Open Crusade April 4

The Original Founders

A quarter of a century ago a group of local business men founded Cedar Hill. They planned constant development of Cedar Hill's beauty—secured it against debt—assured the permanence of its value. Their first wise plans have never been changed. Today the original founders still guide the conservative policies of Cedar Hill.

You'll be hearing Vice President Henry A. Wallace over the Columbia Network and WJSV tomorrow at 11:05 as he gives an address titled "Democracy and the Dignity of Man." He will be talking from the Chicago Civic Opera House as the principal speaker at the triennial national convention of B'nai Brith.

Which sounds like a routine enough announcement. But we think you should know that it has its unusual, in fact quite historical, aspects. For, at approximately the same time that Vice President Wallace is speaking to the convention and the nation in English, he also is speaking to South America, via short wave, in Spanish.

It isn't being done with mirrors, but with a transcription. Mr. Wallace came up to WJSV's Studios on Thursday, made the record in Spanish, which he has been studying for some time, and it's to be played over Columbia's international short wave station, WCBX, beamed toward South America, at 8 p. m.

Incidentally tonight is radio's "moving day" which it's to be hoped most of you are in the know about by this time. Under FCC orders, for clearer reception, most radio stations change their frequencies. WJSV's goes from 1460 on the dial to 1500. It shouldn't create much confusion; it's just a matter of tuning by dial until the push buttons, if you have push buttons, can be changed by your radio man.

The Post Radio Highlights

FREQUENCY CHANGES GO INTO EFFECT THIS MORNING. Four of the five local radio stations are affected, with WMAL remaining the same at 630 on the dial. WRC is heard at 980, WOL at 1260, WINX at 1340 and WJSV at 1500. Dial-twisters thus find those stations a few notches higher on their dials. Push-button owners may tune in via their tuning buttons until their sets are readjusted.

2, WMAL—Rodolfo Michels, Chilean Ambassador to the United States; Adolf A. Berle, jr., Assistant Secretary of State, and Dr. F. Cyril James, vice chancellor of McGill University, talk to the Survey Associates' Western Hemisphere Luncheon.

7, WJSV—Arthur Garfield Hays, C. D. Jackson, Archibald Stevenson and Mrs. Preston Davie talk of civil liberties.

TERRY AND THE PIRATES — Captain's Not Kid(d)ing — BY MILTON CANIFF

SO! THE GREAT KIEL IS COMING TO THE SHIPYARD TO INSPECT THE DEVICE HE PLANNED TO RAID SHIPPING! ...AND I SHALL HAVE TO EXHIBIT GREAT ENTHUSIASM!
THE ODD CRAFT IS NEARLY COMPLETE! WE TESTED THE MAGNETIC TORPEDOES TODAY! THE METAL HULL OF A MERCHANT SHIP WILL DISCHARGE THEM!
SINCE THE UNSUSPECTING MERCHANT SHIP CAPTAIN WILL SEE ONLY WHAT APPEARS TO BE THE LIFE RAFT OF A SUNKEN VESSEL, HE IS CERTAIN TO COME CLOSE ENOUGH TO GIVE THE TORPEDOES A TARGET!
AND YOU SAY THE GREAT KIEL HAS BROUGHT ALONG A YOUNG AMERICAN TO BE A PART OF THE EXPERIMENT?
YES...BY FORCE!
THIS IS MY FIRST EXPERIENCE WITH A RAIDER... WHAT HAPPENS IF WE ARE CAPTURED?
SINCE WE WILL FLY ANY FLAG THAT WILL CONCEAL OUR IDENTITY—AND SINCE WE WILL NOT WEAR UNIFORMS... I IMAGINE THE BRITISH WOULD TAKE PLEASURE IN HANGING US AS PIRATES!

MARY WORTH'S FAMILY — BY DALE ALLEN

TRITE SAYINGS ARE TRUEST, AUNT MARY! FOR INSTANCE... "THERE'S NO PLACE LIKE HOME!"
I SUPPOSE YOU REALIZE, TED, THAT YOUR HOME HAS BEEN IN DANGER!
YES--I GUESS I DID GIVE SUE REASON TO GET PEEVED. BUT SAY! IT'S THE FIRESIDE AND SLIPPERS FOR ME FROM NOW ON!
I SAMPLED THAT NIGHT CLUB LIFE, AND IT'S NO GOOD! YOU COULDN'T DRAG ME INTO ONE OF THOSE PLACES AGAIN!
WHY, TED! YOU'RE NOT DRESSED! DIDN'T I TELL YOU?
WE'RE GOING OUT TOGETHER! I KNOW YOU'VE BEEN BORED WITH A STAY-AT-HOME WIFE--SO TONIGHT YOU CAN TAKE ME TO THAT "CLUB ARGENTINE!"
WHY--ER--
DALE

DONALD DUCK — Another Bird Flies South! — BY WALT DISNEY

MICKEY FINN — A Hit! — BY LANK LEONARD

DIXIE DUGAN — Who's at the Door — BY J. P. McEVOY AND H. J. STRIEBEL

YES—BUT ON WHAT?
WE NEED SO MANY THINGS BUT NOW THAT WE'VE GOT ALL THIS MONEY I CAN'T THINK OF THEM
THE DUGANS AWAKEN EARLY NEXT MORNING FACED WITH THE PROBLEM OF DECIDING WHAT TO DO WITH $10,000
WAAL—FIRST WE KIN BUY—UH—WELL—UH—ANY SUGGESTIONS, DIXIE?
HMMM—NOW—LET—ME—SEE—
THE FRONT DOOR!
QUICK—PULL DOWN THE SHADES!
HIDE THE MONEY!
SHHH—
FASHION CLUB NEWS!

DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY — Zealous Nurse — BY FRANK MARTINEK

WAIT, BUNNY. YOU SAY THE OLD BLIND PEDDLER GAVE YOU THIS PENCIL... FOR YOUR FATHER?
YES, SIR—THIS IS HIS BIRTHDAY. WELL—SO LONG
QUEER! THOSE METAL PENCILS COST MONEY
HEY, DON!
BACK TO QUARTERS... YOU'VE PUNISHED THAT GAME LEG ENOUGH FOR ONE DAY!
NO ARGUMENTS—I'M UNDER ORDERS
SLAVE DRIVER! I'LL SWEAR SOME BRIGHT THOUGHT WAS JUST AIMING MY WAY

BIG CHIEF WAHOO — BY SAUNDERS AND WOGGON

I'LL NOT TRY TO DECEIVE YOU, MOTHER—I GUESS MINNIE-HA-CHA AND I DID GET—WELL—A BIT INFATUATED WITH EACH OTHER!
I FEARED AS MUCH! YOU'VE BEEN OUT DANCING TOGETHER EVERY NIGHT!
WE CAME TO OUR SENSES, THOUGH, AND AGREED TO BEHAVE LIKE GROWN-UPS—IT'S TERRIBLY IMPORTANT TOO THAT WE ALL FORGET THAT LITTLE ROMANTIC SCENE YOU WITNESSED LAST NIGHT!
YOU SEE, MOTHER—I DON'T WANT YOU TO WORRY—BUT IF WAHOO EVER LEARNED I HAD KISSED HIS FIANCEE, THE TRADITION OF HIS PEOPLE DEMANDS THAT HE—KILL ME!
OH, MERCY ON US! HE MUST NEVER FIND OUT!!

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED — See "King of the Royal Mounted" as a movie serial, Fridays, at Ashton Theater, Clarendon, Va.

COME PEACEABLY, FIRE-BUG, AND YOU WON'T BE HURT! ROW THIS WAY. I CAN HEAR YOUR BOAT!
BUT YOU CAN'T SEE ME, MOUNTIE! I WARN YOU. GO AWAY!
NOT WITHOUT YOU!
THEN GO WITH THIS KNIFE!

QUIZ KIDS AUDITIONS START TODAY AT THE HECHT CO.

EVERYBODY WELCOME. AUDITIONS AT 1:00—1:30—2:00—2:30 and 3 P. M. THIRD FLOOR

BILL CRAGO of Station WRC will be Master of Ceremonies. Twenty-five of the 125 children chosen to participate in the contest will be auditioned in relays of 5 each, every half hour from 1 to 3 P. M.

JUDGES will be chosen from among the faculties of various private and public schools throughout the city, together with leading newspaper women of the District. A different jury of judges each day to insure impartiality.

THE WINNER of the Contest will receive a $100 Government Bond and the opportunity of going to Chicago with one parent (all expenses paid) to participate in the National Alka Seltzer Quiz Kid program on a coast-to-coast network.

BEGINNING SATURDAY, MARCH 29th, at 3 A. M.

Radio's Moving Day

The Hecht Co., as a large distributor of radio sets and as a local broadcaster of radio programs, is interested in advising the public that it will be necessary to use the dial tuning on radio sets with push buttons after Saturday, March 29th, for some time until you can make arrangements to have the buttons adjusted to the new wave lengths.

For the benefit of our patrons, we list below the new positions where you will find the local stations on your dial after Saturday, March 29th.
